B-17 Clips Wires, Puts SE-SW Areas In Darkness

A low-flying B-17 plane, coming into Bolling Air Force Base last night, clipped off power wires near 2d and Chesapeake sts. sw., and threw the Congress Heights and Bellevue sections of Washington into darkness.

An eyewitness to the mishap said that the ship missed an apartment house roof by "less than 15 feet" and that there were more than 75 persons in the building.

As a result of the break-out crowded grocery stores, in southwest and southeast Washington with electrically operated cash registers, locked their doors and kept throngs of customers inside for nearly an hour.

Seven Persons Aboard

The ship was coming from Offutt Air Force Base at Omaha, headquarters of The Strategic Air Command, Bolling base officials said.

It was piloted by Lieut. Col. William H. Campbell, with a crew of four and two passengers aboard.

Colonel Campbell, after he landed, told this story to Bolling Base officers:

He was coming in on a normal approach for Runway 35. Wind was gusty, ranging from nothing to 35 miles per hour.

As he passed 2d and Chesapeake sts., the wind suddenly dropped, and the ship's tail fell. The plane was then flying at 115 miles per hour.

As the drop occurred, Colonel Campbell "gave it the gun," increasing his power. There was a blue flash. He did not know what had happened, and continued to make a normal landing. The aircraft was reported undamaged. Nobody aboard was hurt.

Names of other occupants of the plane were given as Maj. J. R. Parker, Offutt Base, copilot; T/Sergt. John C. Caputo; Capt. A. H. Grinsted, jr.; Lieut. Col. Harvey Rivkins and First Lieut. Donald Mathews of Anchorage, Alaska.

Doubt Hitting Wires

In an interview later at Bolling base, Colonel Campbell and Major Parker, both of whom have been decorated for wartime flying service in the Pacific, expressed doubt that their ship actually touched the power lines.

They said rather that "prop wash," or draft from the ship's propellors, flung the wires together and that they then short circuited, "arced" and burned themselves off. The officers said that it would even be possible for this to break a pole, as happened in the accident.

"We didn't touch any wires, we're pretty sure," Colonel Campbell said. "We probably came so close that the prop wash touched

Reds Deny Visa To Newman for Series on Russia

Paris, Nov. 25 (NYHT).—The Soviet Embassy in Paris has officially informed the American Embassy that it has rejected the application for a visa made four months ago by Joseph Newman, who was New York Herald Tribune correspondent in Moscow until this summer.

The Soviet note was dated November 19, after a series of uncensored articles on Russia by Newman appeared in the Herald Tribune and The Washington Post. Newman had "printed in the press defamatory articles concerning the U.S.S.R.," the note said.

Newman commented today that the Soviet Union regards as "defamatory" anything which does not pass through the hands of the Soviet censor. He said: "The Soviet note is not really a reply to my visa application but it is rather the best reply the Russians have produced so far to the series which I wrote."

Lewis Invited To Talk With Southerners

Southern coal producers last night invited renewed contract talks with John L. Lewis.

The Southern producers acted amid reports that other segments of the industry were ready to ask Lewis for peace talks, possibly next week.

Lewis himself was reported about to call off any new strike until after Christmas.

The Southern group telegraphed Lewis that it is "ready to resume conferences at any reasonable time and place you designate for the purpose of again endeavoring to negotiate an agreement that will meet the full requirements of our situation."

Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, said:

"We felt it was time to resume negotiations. Mr. Lewis can advise us if he thinks it's possible to come to terms on a contract."

Moody's message to Lewis recalled that when negotiations between the Southern group and the union at Bluefield, W. Va., were suspended on November 2, it was understood that contract talks could be resumed at any time.

181 Killed in U. S. Holiday Accidents, A Postwar Peak

By The Associated Press

The Nation's death toll in violent accidents over the Thanksgiving Day holiday was one of the highest in several years.

There were at least 181 violent deaths from 6 p. m. Wednesday to midnight Thursday. These include 23 traffic fatalities. Fifty-eight persons died in miscellaneous accidents, including fires, plane crashes, shootings, falls and hunting. Also included were 14 persons killed in Alabama tornadoes.

This year's Thanksgiving violent deaths compared to 114 over the same period last year; 128 in 1947, and 83 in 1946. The totals on Thanksgiving Day holidays during the war years also were below this year's mark.

Clay Resigns Post In Paper Company He Held a Month

Asheville, N. C., Nov. 25 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay announced his resignation today as president of Ecusta Paper Corp., effective as soon as a successor could be named.

Clay, who retired from the Army some months ago after serving as commander of United States forces in Germany, took over the Ecusta presidency only last month.

He said in announcing his resignation that he had no immediate plans for the future and and declined to give his reasons for resigning.

Clay's announcement followed closely the disclosure that Olin Industries, Inc., of Alton, Ill., is going into the cellophane making business at the Ecusta plant at Pisgah Forest, N. C., near Brevard, N. C.

Snow Flurry Gives District Its Second Touch of Winter

Ole Man Winter gave the Washington area the season's second snow flurry in near-freezing temperatures last night.

The wet snow that began to fall shortly before 7 p. m. might have caused hazardous traffic conditions if the mercury had dropped a couple of degrees. The snow stopped officially at 10:21 p. m. according to the National Airport Weather Station.

The Weather Bureau gave a 33-degree reading at 9 last night, but said an expected 28-degree temperature early this morning might cause slippery going.

Today will be cloudy and cold with the mercury in the low 40s.

The year's first snow—a 14-minute afternoon flurry—came to Washington November 18.

At the start of the windy snow flurry, five persons narrowly escaped injury when part of a tree trunk crashed through the glass front of an Acme food market at 1429 20th st., nw. The persons were waiting for a bus at 20th and P sts. nw.

The American Automobile Association reported it was deluged with calls last night from persons planning to go over the road to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia.

The AAA was referring all calls to the Weather Bureau which was saying "go ahead—if you're warmly dressed. The weather up there will be partly cloudy and cold, with the high between 35 and 40 degrees—no snow."

'Snags' Lewis Gaming Jury Locked Up

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

After 18 hours of unsuccessful deliberation, the "Snags" Lewis gambling jury was locked up for the night in the Hotel Continental with orders to try again this morning.

The jury of nine men and three women spent a total of 11 hours trying to decide whether Lewis and 13 others violated the District lottery laws and the Federal conspiracy statute.

Without warning, Judge Matthew F. McGuire ordered the jury locked up at 11:15 p. m., to return at 10 a. m. today. His order was relayed by deputy marshals to counsel for both sides.

At 12:45 a. m., on Thanksgiving Day, after the jury had deliberated for seven hours without reaching a verdict, Judge McGuire allowed the jury to go home for the holiday instead of ordering them to a hotel.

The jury got the case, which started November 2, at 4:40 p. m. Wednesday.

Jurors Question Judge

The monotony of silence was broken by the jury for the first time just before noon yesterday when the jurors asked the judge to answer six questions. Previously the only interruption, except for meals, came at 11:15 p. m. Thanksgiving Eve when Judge McGuire gave the jury the Allen charge, urging the minority to give consideration to the feelings of the majority.

After 11 days of trial the jury took the case at 4:40 p. m. Wednesday. It recessed for supper that night for one hour and deliberated until Judge McGuire delivered his charge, after which deliberations were continued until 12:45 a. m. Thanksgiving morning.

The jury was sent home for Thanksgiving only after its foreman, Condon M. Flynn, 59, 701 19th st. nw., General Accounting Office transporation expert, told Judge McGuire there was no immediate hope of reaching a verdict.

When Judge McGuire asked Flynn if the jury was hopelessly deadlocked, Flynn paused and then gave a positive "yes." The jury resumed dellberation at 10 yesterday morning.

All Arrested in One Raid

Lewis and 13 others are charged with violating the District lottery law and the Federal conspiracy statute. Convictions would carry maximum sentences of eight years in jail and fines of $11,000.

The Government charged Lewis operated a $14,000,000-a-year gambling syndicate from an air-conditioned, sound-proofed room in a bungalow at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md. All the defendants were arrested in the bungalow and 13 in that room, March 25, 1949, by United States deputy marshals.

HUBERT E. HOWARD
Munitions Board Chairman

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday named Hubert E. Howard, chairman of the Defense Department's personnel policy board, to be chairman of the Munitions Board.

Before taking over as chairman of the Defense Department's personnel policy board last September 1, Howard was chairman of the board of the Binkley Coal Co. and Pyramid Coal Corp. of Chicago. A native of Fairfield, Iowa, he is 60.

His appointment will continue in effect at least until the Senate acts on it in the session which begins January 3. Mr. Truman has met with unusual difficulties in his efforts to fill the post.

The President first nominated Carl Ilgenfritz, a United States Steel official. Ilgenfritz agreed to take the job if he could continue to receive his salary from U. S. Steel, a proposition to which the White House agreed, but which was turned down by the Senate. Ilgenfritz would not serve except on those terms.

The job was last held by Donald F. Carpenter, president of Remington Arms Co., Bridgeport, Conn. He resigned last June 30.

U. S. Sergeant Slain in Berlin By Soviet Guard

Berlin, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—An American Air Force sergeant was shot to death tonight by a Russian guard when he failed to halt at a Soviet check point on the outskirts of Berlin, American authorities announced.

The sergeant was driving with two other soldiers and two girls.

The vehicle in which they were riding failed to halt at a check point where the British and Russian sectors of Berlin meet, an announcement said, and the Russian guard opened fire.

The sergeant died in Gatow Military Hospital in the British sector soon after he was taken there.

KEITH C. WARREN — DELIGHT F. MITCHELL
Couple arrested in Los Angeles, suspect in hotel robbery here

The FBI yesterday had assembled most of the pieces in the jig-saw crime career of a young man and a young woman whose trail led from coast to coast.

The fast-moving pair, the FBI said, included Washington in their itinerary and stayed here long enough to hold up the Emery Hotel, 1812 G st. nw., and steal a 1949 Ford convertible coupe which they abandoned near Lynchburg, Va.

The couple, now held in Los Angeles, were identified by the FBI as Delight Francine Mitchell, 23, alias Delight F. Toneman, alias Ginger Conway of Chicago, and Keith Charles Warren, 28, alias James K. Warren, alias Tony Caruso, alias Delbert F. Toneman of Kearney, Nebr.

At about 2 a. m. on September 6, D. F. Quinn, night clerk at the Emery Hotel, was held up and robbed of $48 by a couple who had been registered for several days. The couple removed their registration card from the file but Quinn remembered the name, Toneman.

That same day police here received a report of a 1949 Ford convertible coupe stolen in Washington.

Later in the day the car was found near Lynchburg, Va., its front stove in. A towel drenched with blood and bearing the name of the Emery Hotel was found in the car.

The FBI analyzed the blood. It wasn't human blood. Later it was determined that the car had struck a horse.

Several days went by and Washington police were informed that an $83.20 check signed by Delight F. Toneman for purchase of a typewriter had bounced. Several checks she had cashed at Garfinckel's Department Store also bounced, police were told.

Meanwhile, police in Nassau County, N. Y., picked up a couple named Robert and Elsie Gallant

Truman Tells M'Grath To Crack Down on Atom Secret Leaks

Attorney General And McMahon Called To White House for Parley on Security

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday called Attorney General McGrath to the White House and charged him with protecting national defense information—particularly on atomic weapons — against improper disclosure.

Summoned with McGrath was Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. The two men's comments to reporters after their visit with the President could not be rationally interpreted except on one hypothesis:

That Mr. Truman was upset with "top secret" atomic disclosures recently made by members of Congress. Early this month Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) in a television program spoke of several hitherto secret atomic energy developments. The President did not mention Johnson or any other legislator by name.

Neither Will Verfiy It

Asked if their conference dealt with the remarks of Johnson, McGrath said, "I cannot verify that." The question was then put to McMahon. He replied that he had no comment and would stand on what the Attorney General said.

In the television show, Johnson, a member of the Congressional Atomic Committee, said United States scientists had already developed a bomb "six times" more powerful than used at Nagasaki, and had made "considerable proggress" in obtaining one "a thousand times" more powerful.

Johnson had prefaced his remarks by declaring that what he was about to say was "top secret." He ended by repeating that these facts were "the big secret."

His disclosures came in the course of an argument in which he was urging more secrecy in atomic matters. He said the scientists all have a yen, "like some old fisherwoman, to tell all we know."

Senator Johnson said last night that his broadcast "couldn't possibly have connected with" the President's crackdown "because no secrets were divulged."

Wants Secrets Inviolate

The President, according to McGrath's account of yesterday's White House session, "talked to us about his concern respecting his great responsibility in the field of security information."

He wishes to continue to divulge all the information he can to proper sources, McGrath continued. The President also desires to continue the cooperative relationship with various groups in the legislative and executive branch,

In U. N. Debate

Chinese Accuse Soviet Union Of Complicity in Red Rebellion

Lake Success, Nov. 25 (NYTH).—China today charged the Soviet Union with complicity in the armed rebellion of the Chinese Communists and asked the United Nations to condemn Russia for its actions. Russia and her satellites announced in advance they would not participate in discussions, nor would they be bound by decisions the U. N. may take.

The exchange came in the General Assembly's Political Committee as debate began on a Chinese-sponsored item charging threats to her independence and to the peace of the Far East, which have allegedly resulted from Russian violations of treaties and the U. N. Charter.

China asked the U. N. to throw its "moral power" behind a judgment against Russia for obstructing efforts of the Nationalist government in reestablishing its authority in Manchuria and for giving military and economic aid to the Chinese Communist.

China asked also that U. N. member states refuse to recognize the Communist regime and urged, in effect, a blockade of Communist China as far as further military and economic aid is concerned.

"I do not expect the U. N. to do the fighting for China," Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang, Chinese delegate, said. "I know that the General Assembly has not a single rifle or a

Vote Is 41-6

U. N. Rejects 'Peace Plan' Of Kremlin

Lake Success, Nov. 25 (AP).—The United Nations today beat down decisively a Soviet peace plan that carried a clause accusing the United States and Britain of preparing for a third world war.

Then, by 53 votes to 5, the U. N. approved an American-British program for peace.

The margin for the American-British proposal was the biggest the West ever has received in the U. N. on a major question. The Russian bloc of five stood alone against it, and Yugoslavia abstained.

The heart of Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky's proposal was knocked out, 41 to 6, in the 59-nation Political Committee. Arab Yemen alone voted with the Moscow group in favor of a section calling on the U. S., Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union to draw up a peace pact. The fight will be renewed in the Assembly proper, but there was no prospect of a change in the voting.

Some delegates interpreted the committee vote as a personal blow at Vishinsky, who has bitterly attacked the British and Americans as preparing for a new war and then, almost in the same breath, called on them to swear to a new peace pact among the big five powers.

They saw the heavy vote for the West as an expression of confidence from small and medium countries and indorsement of pleas by Warren R. Austin of the United States and Britain's Hector McNeil for the Russians to roll up their Iron Curtain

17 Poles Expelled By French After Espionage Raids

Paris, Nov. 25 (AP).—French police announced today the expulsion of 17 Poles from the country. At the same time the Interior Ministry said it was holding Joseph Sczerbinki, Polish vice consul at Lille, in a Paris prison on charges of espionage.

These incidents added to the strain on Franco-Polish relations which began with the arrest in Poland last week of Andre Robineau, a French consulate employe, on a spying charge.

The 17 Poles were taken into custody in raids yesterday on the offices of the Polish Red Cross, Boy Scouts and war veterans.

The 17 were freed by police at an unannounced frontier point.

Arias Takes Office, Denied U. S. Approval

BULLETIN

Panama, Republic of Panama, Saturday, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Col. Jose Antonio Remon, chief of the national police (army), and two of his assistants presented their resignations today to President Arnulfo Arias.

Panama City Republic of Panama, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Arnulfo Arias, Panama's third President in a week, took the oath of office before the National Assembly today but shops and business houses remained closed and the political atmosphere was still explosive.

After a week of street fighting in which one person was killed and 16 injured, Arias was placed in power yesterday by the national police, under Col. Jose Antonio Remon, but the new President pledged today that his would be a "civic government" and not under police rule.

Remon told a crowd of 5000 persons at police headquarters that the police "will be no problem to the new President."

The national election board made the inauguration of Arnulfo Arias "official" today by announcing that a recheck of returns in the 1948 election showed that the victory of the late Domingo Diaz was false. It said Arnulfo Arias got 74,080 votes in the election to 71,536 for Diaz.

French Assembly Approves Policy Toward Germany

Paris, Saturday, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The French National Assembly today indorsed the new Western policy toward Germany by a vote of 334 to 248, after an all-night session.

The vote came after some legislators warned that Germany, if granted new concessions, might again become "master of Europe" within 10 years.

The Assembly debated foreign policy, including the Allied decision to halt dismantling of the major steel plants in western Germany.

The vote climaxed three days of debate. The Assembly earlier rejected, 423 to 182, a Communist resolution calling for denunciation of the Marshall Plan and the Atlantic Pact and asking "reaffirmation" of the Franco-Soviet alliance.

6 U. S. Seaports Called 'Perfect' A-Bomb Targets

Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, United States Air Force (ret.) said yesterday the "world's most perfect atomic targets" are Boston, New York, Baltimore, Norfolk, Seattle and San Francisco.

Their enclosed harbors, he said, could be put out of use easily by underwater explosions of atomic bombs planted by submarines or by innocent-looking freighters.

Knerr was Deputy Commander of the United States Strategic Air Force in Europe during World War II. In an article for Nation's Business magazine, he said, 20 atomic bombs would be enough to knock out the six ports, which handled 90 percent of the United States seaborne supplies in the last war.

He said any such attack probably would be accompanied by underwater A-bombing of the Panama Canal, and by air-borne atomic attacks on Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

Destitute Lawyer Takes Milk; Argues Own Case and Wins

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A destitute lawyer charged with stealing a quart of milk won his freedom yesterday in Municipal Court because true justice is often more than book law and cold evidence.

The court papers listed him as Larry M. Lawrence, 63, of no fixed address. He was tall, slightly stooped and shabbily dressed. His hair was gray and he wore metal-rimmed eyeglasses.

At the outset of the trial, no one in the courtroom knew he was an attorney.

Lawrence waived reading of the charge, waived a jury trial, pleaded innocent and elected to be tried before the judge—Judge Armond W. Scott.

The first witness against him was Police Pvt. Alvin Bailey who testified he arrested Lawrence early yesterday in the act of taking four half-pints of milk from in front of a drugstore at 10th and F sts. nw.

"He said he had lost 40 pounds in the past three months and was trying to gain it back,' Bailey said.

Next, Prosecutor Martin J. McNamara, 2d, put on the stand an employe of the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, who testified the firm processes milk such as the four bottles in evidence.

Lawrence objected. This was no proof of ownership, for the dairy might have sold the milk, in which

Labor Groups Back Food Surplus Plan

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Support of the proposal for a one-billion - dollar International Commodity Clearing House was voiced at the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) meeting yesterday by labor and farm groups.

Among the speakers for the ICCH was Murray D. Lincoln, Ohio farm leader. Lincoln has been rumored for a long time as a farmer-labor candidate on the Democratic ticket for Senator from Ohio in opposition to Senator Robert A. Taft (R., O.). After Lincoln's talk yesterday, FAO delegates were told that he plans to announce his candidacy about December 12. The announcement is being delayed, it was stated, to give Lincoln time to change his party affiliation. Lincoln is now registered as a Republican.

Three nations opened a drive at FAO yesterday to force the United States to pay a greater share of the costs of FAO.

Spearheaded by French Delegate G. Henri Janton, France, India and Australia demanded that this country be assessed a greater proportion of FAO's cost. Janton pointed out that the United States pays about 40 percent of the cost of the United Nations and only 27 percent of the cost of FAO.

This discrepancy must be corrected, Janton asserted — after FAO has decided upon a permanent site for FAO headquarters.

British Lands May Soon Send Coffee to U. S.

Harold Wilson, president of the British Board of Trade, indicated yesterday that coffee from British possessions might soon be imported into the United States in increasing amounts to help relieve the present coffee shortage.

At a press conference yesterday, Wilson was asked about the possibility of diverting some British East African production to the United States, as a potential dollar-earner for the sterling bloc.

The British Food Ministry, he replied, "is considering the matter at this moment."

Wilson, who is here as head of the British delegation to the Food and Agricultural Organization conference, said he will also study means of increasing British exports to the dollar area, particularly the United States, while he is in this country.

He proposes to talk to American importers and merchants, and agents of British exporters, to find out how trade can be stimulated.

He declared that his government is considering all means, short of subsidies, to give incentives to British exporters.

For Big Firm

Army Denies Bid Rigging For Coolers

By the United Press

The Army Quartermaster Corps admitted yesterday that its specifications for a $100,000 water cooler contract contained language borrowed intact from Westinghouse Electric Corp., sales literature.

But Quartermaster spokesmen told House investigators that no "bid rigging" was involved. They added that Westinghouse got the contract only because its bid was the lowest of 11 submitted.

A House Judiciary Subcommittee headed by Repreesntative Emmanuel Celler (D., N. Y.), is looking into the cooler deal.

Orville Morrison, Philadelphia, president of the Sunroc Refrigeration Co., told the subcommittee earlier this week that smaller firms like his own don't have a chance against giant Westinghouse and General Electric Co., in bidding for military service contracts.

"Tailor-Made" Specifications

Morrison said the specifications were "tailor-made" to fit Westinghouse equipment. In fact, he asserted, much of the language of the specifications was lifted verbatim from Westinghouse sales literature.

Brig. Gen. E. M. Brannon, Assistant Army Judge Advocate General for Procurement, assured the subcommittee it is not in the least unusual for the Army to ask industrial concerns for advice and technical recommendations to be used in drawing up contract specifications.

He said that is often the only "practical" way to purchase highly technical equipment, and the system still leaves plenty of room for competitive bidding.

Francis P. Kerr, head of the QM refrigeration section, said he "conferred with Westinghouse representatives two or three times before drawing up the specifications."

"But I also conferred with other manufacturers of water coolers," he asserted.

Kerr said the Westinghouse sales literature was used because it contained the "best definition" of a hermetically sealed water cooler that Quartermaster Corps officers were able to find.

Truman Hits Atom Leaks

but he wants to be sure secret data which is revealed to them is held inviolate.

He therefore asked the Attorney General, McGrath went on, to see to it that all such information "is given all the protection possible under existing security statutes against unlawful divulging."

McGrath and McMahon denied that the conference had anything to do with the scheduled Anglo-Canadian-United States talks on atomic partnership, or with any plans to amend the present atomic energy law's secrecy provisions, or with any presidential intent to give a wider dissemination to atomic information.

Accordingly, there was only one thing that the conference could have applied to. If there were any doubts, McGrath removed them by saying:

"The very purpose (of Mr. Truman's instructions to him) is to permit the President to continue to deal with legislative groups" with the feeling that secret information would not be disclosed.

A reporter asked McGrath if the penalties in the atomic energy law applied to disclosures by members of Congress. He answered that they applied to everyone, legislators included.

The general interpretation among reporters was that the President had called McGrath and McMahon to the White House, letting them enter and leave publicly through the gantlet of waiting newsmen, as an unmistakable sign of his concern over atomic leaks, and as a warning of his intent to stop it.

McMahon said the White House conference did not touch on the problem of finding a successor for David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Lilienthal resigned this week, effective December 31, to return to private life after 20 years of Government service.

McMahon said it will be "difficult to get a man to fill all the specifications that could be written for the job," and added that he has no candidates to propose to Mr. Truman.

McMahon himself has been mentioned unofficially as a possible nominee for the post.

But associates said he is not seeking the job, and probably would decline it if it were offered.

63 Maritime Nonveterans Given Notice

Sixty-three persons in the division of accounts of the Maritime Commission here received notices of separation from the service yesterday. The separations are effective December 27, commission officials said.

Some of those terminated have more than 20 years service. This was made necessary, officials said, because veterans, several years their juniors in point of service, have more preference points for retention. Others, it was reported, received notices of reductions in grades, though they have as much as 27 and 32 years of service.

A Maritime Commission official said a reduction is necessary to enable the commission to stay within its 1950 appropriation. The reduction has been contemplated since beginning of the present fiscal year on July 1, he said.

Under a new procedure worked out by the General Accounting Office, the Maritime Commission will decentralize substantial amounts of its accounting work to field offices in New York, New Orleans, and San Francisco. However, personnel will not be increased in those offices.

Meanwhile, a backlog of wartime accounting work will be completed here on December 15, the official said. Hence, the cuts were made in the Washington office.

Czech Priests Pardoned

Prague, Nov. 25. (AP).—President Klement Gottwald today pardoned 13 more Catholic priests, some in jail and some awaiting prosecution, it was officially announced.

CIO Orders Hearing on State Council

CIO President Philip Murray yesterday again cracked down on the CIO's pro-Communist elements by ordering a hearing on charges that the California Industrial Union Council is a "notorious front organization of the Communist Party.

The hearing, to be held here December 19, is expected to lead to a revocation of the State council's charter. The inquiry will be conducted by a three-man committee: CIO Vice President Allan S. Haywood; John Brophy, director of CIO industrial union council, and John J. Moran, vice president of the Communication Workers of America.

Five specific charges have been made against the California council by 17 CIO right-wing leaders. The council leaders are accused of working with the Communist Party to defeat labor-endorsed candidates in the 1948 elections; of encouraging opposition to the ECA program; of endorsing the Communist daily newspaper; of attacking CIO leaders; of interfering in the internal affairs of CIO locals.

The complaint charges that the present California council is no longer representative of the CIO membership in the State, and that more than three fourths of the membership abandoned the council because it had been captured by the pro-Communists.

Just about one year ago, the CIO revoked the charter of the New York City Industrial Union Council on similar charges, and later reconstituted the council with the right-wing fully in control. Recently, the CIO threw out two Red-tinted unions, and is planning to try 10 other lefty affiliates.

At CIO headquarters here it was said that very few industrial union councils around the country are still dominated by the pro-Communist faction within the CIO.

Adm. Jelley is Named Chief of Yards, Docks

Rear Admiral Joseph F. Jelley, jr., was nominated by President Truman yesterday to be Navy Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

The appointment will be submitted to the Senate for confirmation.

Grange Backs Education Aid Under Local Governments

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 25 (AP). The 12-day National Grange convention ends tonight with formal installation of Albert S. Goss as its reelected master and action on a few remaining resolutions.

A major resolution still before the Grange was one against the farm price support program of Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. It won strong approval of the agriculture committee, and Master Goss predicted it would get delegate approval without being weakened.

The resolution's opponents include Ohio Grange Master Joseph W. Fichter, Oregon Master Morton Tompkins and California Master George Sehlmeyer.

Resolutions were approved calling for:

Better understanding of the responsibilities of citizenship.

Support of the Hoover Commission on governmental reorganization in the interest of economy.

Increasing of estate and gift taxes.

Lowering of income tax at lower levels and cutting down excise taxes.

Support of the school lunch program.

Extension of library service to all rural areas.

Federal aid to education on the elementary and secondary level—but only if the law provides that all aid funds be spent as determined by State and local governments.

Termination of the Marshall Plan in 1952 "except for specific individual countries that may need some additional assistance in completing their recovery program."

Freer international trade on a fair basis.

Provision of Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans to States, counties and municipalities at low interest rates "so that more local needs can be provided and financed at the local level."

Marshall Gets Mayors' Award

Gen. George C. Marshall received the United States Conference of Mayors award for distinguished public service yesterday in a White House ceremony.

The wartime Army Chief of Staff, former Secretary of State and present head of the American Red Cross is the first man to be so honored.

President Truman made today's presentation in accord with the mayors' plan to have it delivered by the Chief Executive when circumstances permit.

The award itself is in the form of a bronze plaque bearing the words "public service is a public trust."

It is to be given for outstanding service "to any level of government—either Federal, State or local."

Defense Chief Praises Navy For Economy

Defense Secretary Johnson yesterday gave the Navy a pat on the back for efficiency and economy in its reserve training system.

His praise followed an announcement that the Navy was reorganizing its training program so as to train an additional 10,000 reservists while saving some two million dollars in costs. That, said Johnson, was an example of what the services were doing to meet his demands for economy.

"The Navy," he said, "with a reduced budget and acting on its own initiative, has analyzed its total seagoing reserve training program and with a two-million-dollar-a-year reduction in expenditure has devised a way to increase its reserve fleet training by 30 percent."

The Defense Department explained that the saving would be effected by taking of service this fiscal year 65 of its 172 vessels earmarked for reserve training. Most of the ships to be laid up are small craft, whose crews will be transferred to the larger vessels retained. This, in turn, will enable the larger ships to make more cruises annually, thus affording training to more reserve personnel.

The department said 10 cruises a year were planned for destroyers and destroyer escorts and four annually for the smaller vessels. By that method, it said, at least 4330 officers and 42,000 men, 10,000 more than have been afforded training in the past, can be given two weeks at sea each year.

Adm. Holloway Lists Key Aims Of Annapolis

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 25 (AP). Liberal education and character building are among key aims of the Naval Academy, its superintendent said today.

"We must send forth graduates who are humane, tolerant, broad-minded persons of keen spiritual, moral and personal perception," said Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr.

"We must give them the sort of liberal education which will make them protagonists in maintaining the dignity of man and the great human values," he added in a prepared speech.

Holloway flew here from Annapolis to address the annual convention of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

"The development of character,' he said, "should be one of the college's recognized goals. Every midshipman at Annapolis goes to church."

Athletic coaches also "play a tremendous role" in character building, Holloway said.

He added:

"Our program is based upon what we consider to be the needs of future naval officers, namely:

"(1) Character and leadership, (2) An understanding of human values, (3) Clear and logical thought, (4) Scientific insight, (5) Professional knowledge, and (6) Physical fitness."

Fraternities Take No Action on Race Issue

An effort to put the National Interfraternity Conference on record as opposing racial or religious discrimination in college Greek-letter societies appeared to have died yesterday.

Judge Frank H. Myers of Municipal Court, chairman of the conference, told the forty-first annual session meeting at the Mayflower Hotel that the executive committee had "correctly" decided that the issue should not be taken up.

A resolution offered at the 1948 meeting said that in accepting members a fraternity chapter should be governed by a candidate's character and personality "rather than his race, color, religion or nationality." The resolution was referred to the 57 national fraternities which are members of the conference.

Replies Received From 17

Only 17 replied at all, Myers said, and of these 12 said the matter was "not proper for conference consideration."

"This conference," Myers said, "has definitely indicated that the matter of the qualifications of its membership is solely the business of each fraternity and that the conference should not attempt to consider the subject.

However, he indicated at the conference banquet last night that more discussion on the issue was expected at the closing sessions today.

Wilson Gets Award

Last night some 700 applauded at the annual banquet as Leroy A. Wilson, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., was presented the National Interfraternity Conference's annual award "for distinguished service to youth through the American college fraternity."

The gold medallion was presented by Judge Myers. He said that Wilson's main hobby is his interest and active participation in the conference, of which he was chairman in 1944.

Cornell University's Interfraternity Council was awarded the conference's service award for "the greatest progress of interfraternity conference on its campus." Runners-up were: the University of Iowa, Pennsylvania State College and Ohio State University-sity.

Morris Delivers Address

George Maurice Morris, past president of the American Bar Association, speaker of the evening, discussed fraternities as "affirmative agencies in the college educational process.

"The education a man acquires in a fraternity house may not entirely equip him to meet all life's perplexities," he said, "but it certainly goes definitely to that end."

LEROY WILSON
Frat man cited

Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, was toastmaster. Among the guests at the head table were: Fred M. Vinson, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court; Harold H. Burton, Supreme Court Justice; Sherman Minton, Supreme Court Justice, and Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan.

In yesterday morning's session, Associate Justice Tom C. Clark of the Supreme Court headed a panel discussion on juvenile delinquency.

A fresh attempt may be made to bring the antidiscrimination issue before the meeting, which ends today. Ten days ago the Dartmouth College Interfraternity Council urged a dozen Northeastern colleges and universities to support such a movement this year.

Clark Heads Panel

Some 600 persons had registered yesterday for the conference. The 57 fraternities represent a total of 2768 chapters with a membership of a quarter of a million.

Clark said that a felony is committed every 20 seconds in the United States and that half are committed by persons under 21.

In the automobile-theft category he said, 67.4 percent of the crimes are committed by boys and girls 21 or younger.

Clark further said: "I think the importance of the problem is emphasized by the fact that the American Legion is now backing a bill in Congress to increase the age of offenses in so far as courts are concerned to where people up to 25 years of age would be tried in juvenile courts rather than regularly constituted courts."

UJA Gets Requests For $272,455,000 From 3 Sub-units

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 25 (AP). The United Jewish Appeal today received requests for $272,455,000 to meet the 1950 relief needs of its three subsidiaries.

The subsidiaries made their request for funds at the opening of the UJAs national conference. The total was almost 75 million dollars less than the amount called for last year.

The United Palestine Appeal asked for $209,599,800; the Joint Distribution Committee sought $44,512,000; and the United Service for New Americans asked $18,384,000.

Bojangles Robinson Dead at 71 in N. Y.

BILL ROBINSON
"Curtain"

New York, Nov. 25 (U.P.)—Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, the famous Negro tap dancer whose dancing feet earned him close to three million dollars, died tonight practically broke.

His heart failed him at the age of 71.

He died at 7:28 at Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital after being ill for two weeks. His death saddened Broadway, which had been making plans for a monster benefit to be given the night of December 5 at "Bop City," a night club which has featured many great Negro stars.

With him at his death were his second wife and her sister, Mrs. Dorothy Small.

He was in an oxygen tent, where he had been almost constantly for the last week. Until today he seemed to be holding his own. Shortly before noon, doctors announced that he had taken a critical turn for the worse. He failed rapidly then.

Bojangles, the grandson of a Virginia slave, had been in perfect health until a couple of years ago, when he celebrated his sixtieth year in show business by dancing backward 60 blocks down Broadway.

Earned Big Sums

Though he could read and write little, Robinson earned fabulous sums with his highly educated feet. But dice that couldn't be educated, fancy living and a divorce, plus a generous heart that made it impossible to turn down the genuine needy, ate up his money almost as fast as he made it.

Bojangles was a nickname hung on him by a crony some 35 years ago, before he became famous. No one ever could explain what it meant or how it came to be uttered.

Robinson was called "the king of the tap dancers" and he was exactly that. He originated the famous stair dance which so many performers have copied.

Bill couldn't remember when he wasn't dancing. He was shuffling out steps in his bare feet when he was a young orphan in Richmond, Va., where he was born May 25, 1879. He never took a dancing lesson in his life, but he gave many of them.

Started in D. C.

He sold papers, shined shoes and worked around a racing stable in Washington, D. C., as he grew up.

Robinson estimated that he earned around three million dollars with his dancing feet. He earned it in vaudeville, in musical comedy and in the movies. In his last two decades, his salary generally was around $3500 a week, although there were times when it was higher.

His manager and first wife saw to it that he put some money away in his later years. When he and "Little Bo" were divorced six years ago, he made a large settlement on her. When his fatal illness began, it developed that Bill had no financial backlog and friends immediately came to his support.

"Copasetic"

Robinson had no formal education but he made a contribution to Webster's dictionary—the word "copasetic." Bill said it was something he just made up when he was a kid. It means "very O. K.," or wonderful. It crept into general usage, resulting in dictionary recognition.

Besides "Brown Buddies," the Broadway shows in which Bill starred included two editions of the revue "Blackbirds," "The Hot Mikado," and "Memphis Bound."

In movies, Robinson did his first Hollywood job in 1932 in "Dixiana," and followed that with a dozen others. It was in "The Little Colonel," when Shirley Temple was still a tot, that he taught the star how to dance.

Robinson first married Fannie Clay of Chicago in 1923. She got a Reno divorce in 1943. On January 27, 1944, Robinson, then 66, was married in Columbus, Ohio, to Elaine Plaines of Brooklyn, a 23-year-old dancer known professionally as Sue Dash. Robinson had no children.

5 Men, Woman Arrested in Gaming Raid

Two men arrested a year ago in alleged headquarters of a numbers ring here were picked up again yesterday, along with four others, in the same place and on the same charges.

As in the raid a year ago, four others were arrested with them, but the four were not the same ones caught a year ago.

Sergt. Phillip L. Abel, of the 13th Police Precinct, said the two ringleaders are Ben Hillman, 50, and Winston Simms, 49, both of 2315 Champlain st. nw., where the raid was made.

Watched Since November 10

He said precinct police have watched the place since November 10, and undercover men made numbers plays with them since that time. Warrants were obtained.

Sergeant Abel said that in a rear room, officers found a table piled high with numbers slips. He said they checked a report that $5000 was in the place in a chest, and found that amount, $2800 in cash, and the rest in bonds. The funds were not confiscated.

Three men were arrested, as well as a woman who police said walked in with numbers slips while they were there. The four were George J. Williams, 22, of 2296 Champlain st. nw.; Frank Penn, 38, of 1840 Mintwood pl. nw; Robert L. Charles, 63, of 2323½ Champlain st. nw., and Lucy Brown, 28, of 2378 Champlain st. nw.

Hearing Set for December 1

All were arraigned before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence, and released on bond for hearing December 7. Hillman and Simms posted $2000 bonds each, and the others $1000 each.

Sergeant Abel said he was convinced the place was a headquarters of a "small time independent ring" doing $200 to $300 a day in numbers business. He said that though the place has been closely observed since November 10, no one has appeared to "pick up" the bets for a larger organization

Gould Heiress Weds Officer She Broke With Over Estate

Comdr. Ernest Hoefer, Jr., and his bride, the former Silvia Gould

Roxbury, N. Y., Nov. 25 (AP).—Heiress Silvia Gould, who broke her engagement to Lieut. Comdr. Ernest Hoefer, jr., on the eve of their wedding scheduled for September 24, was married to the handsome naval officer last night.

The simple ceremony was arranged on short notice at Furlough Lodge, Seager, N. Y., home of the 31-year-old heiress to part of the fortune of her great-grandfather, Jay Gould.

The bride had said she cancelled her engagement to the 29-year-old naval officer because he refused to sign away dower rights to her estate.

Newspapers had said the wedding was called off because of Hoefer's refusal to give up his Navy career and become a businessman in New York City.

The reports were called "entirely erroneous" by the twice-married Mrs. Gould. "I had every intention of living with him on any assignment he had," she said.

Reached by telephone at the bride's estate after the wedding, Hoefer refused to comment on how their differences had been reconciled. Neither would he talk about their plans.

Asked if he would continue his career, he said "Well, I'm still in the Navy."

Blonde Held in Robbery . . .

The Washington Post
Fur-clad Mrs. Thelma Ruth Nichols, 23, leaves the United States Commissioner's Office yesterday in custody of a smiling Deputy United States Marshal

Mrs. Thelma Ruth Nichols, 23, petite and attractive, was released in $1000 bond yesterday on a charge that she robbed a newly discharged soldier of $800.

She was arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence on the robbery charge, and the case was continued to December 7. The continuance was granted so police may get the complaining witness, former Pvt. David R. Williams, 27, back from his home in Philadelphia to testify.

Williams told police early last Tuesday that he was returning to his home from Atlanta and stopped in Washington Monday night. He said he met a girl here, went to several taverns with her, and finally to a room in a small hotel. When he awoke, he said, his $800 terminal leave money and accumulated pay, as well as the girl, were gone.

Searching for the girl, described in detail by Williams, police arrested Mrs. Nichols Thursday. They said she admitted being with Williams, but denied getting the money. She told officers she lives at 423 15th st. se.

Couple Seized for Robbery

on suspicion of burglaries in New York State.

Nassau County police learned that the Gallant couple had come from Reno, Nev., in a 1942 Chrysler which had been stolen in Reno in August. This car was later found abandoned outside Hartford, Conn.

Tonemans Mentioned

Because the Dyer Act had been violated when a stolen car was driven across a State line, the FBI questioned the Gallants.

They told the FBI that they had driven east with a couple by the name of Toneman and that the Tonemans had supplied the car.

The FBI report forwarded to the bureau's office here contained the information that Mrs. Gallant had also known the other woman as Delight Francine Mitchell.

Mother Reported Her "Missing"

The FBI found in its files a missing-persons report made during the summer by Mrs. Grace Mitchell Condic of Chicago.

Mrs. Condic had reported her daughter, Delight Francine Mitchell, missing and told this story:

That a man who called himself Tony Caruso and identified himself as a talent scout for Charley Spivak, the orchestra leader, had offered to sign Miss Mitchell as a singer with the Spivak orchestra.

The girl left with "Tony Caruso" for New Orleans, allegedly to join the Spivak organization.

Two weeks later the mother received a telegram from her daughter asking that she wire her $50. The mother wired the money and heard no more from her daughter.

The FBI sent pictures of the girl to Nassau County and Reno after the clerk at the Emery Hotel had identified her picture as that of the girl involved in the holdup.

Worked in Gambling House

Reno police advised the FBI that the picture had been identified as that of a girl known in Reno as "Ginger Conway," a shill girl in a gambling establishment. Reno police said the girl was wanted there for jumping her hotel bill.

It developed that the only thing found in the hotel room vacated by the girl was a calling card bearing the name "James K. Warren, Hollywood, Calif."

The FBI then forwarded the picture of the girl to its office in Los Angeles and Wednesday night she was arrested on the street in Hollywood. A short time later, the FBI also had Warren, alias Toneman, alias Caruso in custody.

The pair was arraigned on the West Coast before a United States Commissioner on a charge involving the District car theft. They were held in $5000 bond each pending arrival of papers from the office of the United States Attorney here.

Confession Reported

The FBI said the couple admitted the hotel stickup here and the theft of a car in Reno, and also told about stealing a 1946 Plymouth in Orlando, Fla.

As sketched by the FBI, the couple in recent months had traveled from Chicago to New Orleans, from New Orleans to Reno, from Reno to Connecticut, from Connecticut to Washington, from Washington to Florida to Los Angeles.

The FBI's file on Warren begins in May, 1941, when he was arrested in Lincoln, Neb., on a charge of impersonating an FBI agent.

Name as Deserter

According to FBI records, Warren received a bad conduct discharge from the Navy in February, 1944, subsequently entered the Army and was declared a deserter by the Army in March, 1945.

The FBI arrested Warren in May, 1945, and his card shows he received a seven-year term for desertion by an Army court martial.

He was again arrested in November, 1948, in Media, Pa., on charges of adultery and bigamy, and was fined $25 and given a six-month jail term.

The FBI lists his occupation as a trumpet player.

1st Turkey Dinner Too Much for DPs

New York, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—A shipload of 1100 displaced persons arrived today aboard the General MacCrae from Bremerhaven, still suffering from the effects of their first Thanksgiving.

The passengers, representing 14 nationalities, were served complete turkey dinners yesterday. One man asked if Americans ate like that all the time.

Morelli Dies In Chicago Electric Chair

Chicago, Saturday, Nov. 26 (AP) "Mad Dog" Killer James Morelli died early today in the electric chair.

The 22-year-old murderer was executed for his part in Chicago's bloodiest killing orgy since the 1929 St. Valentine's Day massacre.

He entered the Cook County Jail chamber at 12:02 a. m. (CST) and was pronounced dead eight minutes later.

Two federal judges turned down eleventh-hour appeals today by the wife of the 23-year-old murderer, who was convicted in Chicago's bloodiest killing orgy since the 1929 St. Valentine's Day massacre.

Only a last-minute appeal to Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson appeared possible. And the Governor, who denied clemency but granted a second six-week reprieve last August 10, has indicated he will not intervene again.

Morelli's lawyers also have been turned down twice by the Illinois Supreme Court, twice by the United States Supreme Court, and twice today in Federal Courts—once by a district judge and three hours later by an appeals judge.

Also thwarted was an escape plot which police said they foiled yesterday in arresting two young men carrying hacksaws and a pistol.

Death Ends Attempt at 100-Day Diet

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 25 (AP).—Percy Coplon, who was nearly as wide as he was tall, died today on the ninety-second day of a planned 100-day fast.

Percy collapsed and fell in the bathroom at home last midnight. He was dead when a physician arrived. The physician said Percy died "as a result of a fall, associated with other causes."

Percy told reporters he was "fat and 53, 5 feet tall, 5 feet around and too fond of my wife's cooking."

His weight and width dropped steadily during his long foodless experiment. He pushed the scales to a mere 245 yesterday, as compared to 357 on August 25 when he missed his first meal.

Percy said he started the fast to overcome increasing drowsiness, a handicap in attending his roadside restaurant.

Just yesterday he bemoaned having to miss Thanksgiving Day feasts. He spoke lovingly of food as he told of eating "a dozen eggs for breakfast many a time."

case the purchaser must prosecute the case, not the dairy.

"Very good," said Judge Scott. "The Supreme Court agrees with you, and so must I. Objection sustained."

Prosecutor McNamara quickly obtained an adjournment so he could get better evidence.

When the case resumed, the driver who delivered the milk testified he had placed a case of it in front of the drugstore. The Government rested.

Addressing Lawrence, Judge Scott said, "You did take the milk, didn't you?"

The defendant admitted it, but asked for a chance to explain.

He said that for 25 years he has been a member of the Texas bar and practiced law in that State. Recently he came to Washington to apply for admittance to the Supreme Court bar. He also took a civil service test to be an attorney-examiner, and passed, he said.

He had $500 with him here, but when he suffered at attack of ptomaine poisoning, he said, the money was soon spent. Then the episode of the milk occurred.

Judge Scott summoned McNamara to the bench, and the prosecutor said he wished to nolle-prosse the case.

"I was going to suggest you do just that," said the judge.

Lawrence thanked court and prosecutor when his case was dismissed.

When reporters asked McNamara why he decided to dismiss an apparently airtight case, he replied:

"I believe it was the just thing to do. I would do the same thing for anyone in the same situation."

Tops in Big Top

Gargantua, Circus Ape, Dead at 19

GARGANTUA

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25 (AP).—Gargantua the Great, frightful gorilla who awed 40 million circus fans, died today in his air conditioned cage.

It wasn't known just what killed the 550-pound 5-foot 6-inch gorilla, who had lived to the ripe old age—for gorillas in captivity—of 19 or 20 years. It possibly was pneumonia, complicated by cancer.

Gargantua's colorful career as a circus star came to an end on the same day as the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus brought its 1949 season to an end.

Jose Tomas, Gargantua's keeper for the past 10 years, found him at 9 a. m. today, huddled on his stomach in a corner of the cage.

After the gorilla was pronounced dead, the huge glassed-in cage was shrouded in canvas. It remained in the menagerie tent while thousands walked past unaware of the tragedy.

The show went on in traditional fashion.

Children dragged through the menagerie tent, eating candy and asking why that cage was covered with canvas.

Gargantua, the most publicized gorilla in history, began life in the jungles of Africa. Mrs. Gertrude Linz of Brooklyn bought him from a tramp steamer captain and kept him for several years as a house pet.

Mrs. Linz yesterday sobbed: "I'm sorry he lived as long as he did," according to the United Press. "He should never have been in a cage. He needed air and sunshine."

John Ringling North, who became president of the circus when his uncle, John Ringling, died late in 1936, bought the gorilla.

North bought Gargantua for $10,000, but not long afterward said, "he's worth $100,000." He was not insured.

In his youth, a can of lye thrown in his face gave Gargantua an ugly sneer which added to his value as a circus attraction.

In February, 1941, North bought Toto as a mate for Gargantua. A widely publicized "wedding" between the two was held at circus winter quarters, but they never mated.

Army Discharges Man Who Grew Too Large

Camp Hood, Tex., Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Pfc. Robert E. Binns outgrew the Army today.

When Binns, now 20, left Alliance, Ohio, to enlist in the Army in 1947, he thought he had stopped growing. But the 314-pound GI now stands 6 feet 4.

The Army, unable to find clothes to fit Binns, decided to give him an honorable discharge.

German Parliament Expels Schumacher

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 25 (AP).—A bitter personal feud between Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and Social Democratic leader Kurt Schumacher over the new Allied-German agreement rocked the West German Republic today.

Schumacher was barred from the next 20 days' sittings of Parliament—which means he will be out until about next March—for calling Adenaue. "chancellor of the Allies" in debate.

A full scale crisis was averted only by the Social Democrats' decision not to boycott Parliament in protest.

"My exclusion strongly endangers further collaboration on this house," said Schumacher, one-armed, one-legged chief of the opposition to Adenauer's coalition government. "The Social Democratic Party has not yet decided how it will react, but it will react."

The exclusion order was issued by the Council of Elders, which held he insulted Adenauer by implying the chancellor was a puppet of the Western powers.

"The most serious insult imaginable" was Adenauer's view. The Christian Democratic leader, 74, told newsmen he would have accepted an apology from Schumacher, but none was forthcoming.

The Parliament voted down a Social Democratic motion challenging the authority of Adenauer to sign the agreement.

The Western Allied high commissioners announced the German Republic is to work for a year in the framework of its newly expanded powers without further revisions.

The negotiations with Adenauer are complete and the 10-point pact they signed yesterday is not to be regarded as "a stepping stone for further demands," the representatives of the United States, Britain and France told a news conference.

A statement said the agreement sought to:

1—Promote the prestige and authority of the West German Federal Government.

2—Reintroduce Germany into international political society.

3—Remove causes of friction between the occupying powers and the German people.

The agreement is to stand until the occupation statute (a provisional peace treaty) is reviewed next autumn, the commissioners said.

In return for Adenauer's promises to join in the international Ruhr Authority and to cooperate in satisfying Allied claims for security, the Germans gained important concessions on the dismantling of factories, ship-building and foreign representation.

Arrests Made

Czech Reds Shift Purge To Farmers

Prague, Nov. 25 (AP).—Communist Czechoslovakia's middle-class purge, which already has jailed thousands of businessmen, turned today to large farm owners.

The drive, and its apparent aim to collectivize agriculture, had been heralded by a government spokesman, Planning Minister Jaromir Dolansky.

"The villages too must be socialized," he said.

The big farmers are charged with "economic sabotage"—failure to fulfill crop-delivery quotas or refusal to follow government-dictated planting programs.

No one said how many farmers had been arrested, but the Communist Party newspaper Rude Pravo reported the action was on a broad scale.

"The penalties must be harsh," the paper declared.

Irked GI Asks Asylum

Berlin, Nov. 25 (AP).—The Soviet-licensed news agency ADN said tonight an American soldier has renounced his citizenship and asked asylum from the East Zone Communist government.

The agency identified him as Air Force Sergt. Arthur Basauri, 25, a native of Superior, Ariz., and of Spanish descent.

ADN said Basauri tired of racial discrimination and officer arrogance in the United States forces and resented his inability to get work, during civilian life in America.

a regimental setup.

According to the ADN report, Basauri was discharged from the Army in 1945 and attempted to enter the University of Michigan. He said he gave up when he could not find work to enable him to study.

In 1948, said the ADN story, he reenlisted and was promoted to sergeant and sent to Germany.

In Frankfurt, the Air Force said an airman named Arturo Bazauri had been missing since an escape from the Wiesbaden stockade July 29.

They said they did not know whether this was the "Arthur Basauri" described as renouncing his American citizenship in the Soviet zone.

[The United Press quoted Air Force officers as saying Bazauri escaped while awaiting confirmation of a court-martial sentence of three months at hard labor and a bad-conduct discharge for stealing a post exchange radio.]

amounts to reaffirmation of the U. N. Charter. In its key sections, it calls on U. N. members to take part in all the work of the U. N.: To restrain the use of the veto in the Security Council (where Russia has vetoed 41 majority decisions), to settle disputes by peaceful means, to cooperate for regulation of conventional armaments and to give up some national sovereignty to set up effective international control of atomic energy.

Israel, in U. N., Rejects Internationalizing

Lake Success, Nov. 25 (NYHT). Israel today rejected the American-supported plan for internationalization of Jerusalem and proposed an agreement with the United Nations to recognize modern Jerusalem as a part of the Jewish state and pledge Israeli protection of holy places in that area.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett told the special Political Committee of the U. N. General Assembly that factors of history and necessity have welded Jewish Jerusalem to Israel. He said it was not feasible, practical, fair or possible to separate the two by imposing a U. N. regime on the city.

Girl, 12, Survives 100-Foot Fall

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

JANNIE BETTY HENRY, of Rutledge, Pa., near Philadelphia, is in serious condition in a hospital after being found in a state of near exhaustion beside the dead body of her 11-year-old sister under a 100-foot high railroad trestle. The girls were found Thanksgiving Day, 17 hours after they were reported missing by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James F. Henry. Jannie, 12, in a moment of consciousness said she heard her sister scream "when she fell through the trestle and when I ran to help her I fell through, too"

French Strike Fizzles; Many Defy Walkout

Paris, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—France's one-day general strike fizzled today.

It only partially slowed down the nation's economy as hundreds of thousands of workers defied orders of union chiefs and stayed at their jobs.

Officials called it the biggest postwar defeat for the Communist and Socialist labor organizations who had called out almost five million workers in what was to have been France's biggest strike in 15 years.

The walkout was called to demand general wage increases and a return to free collective bargaining.

It brought to a halt most operations in heavy industry, mines, shopping and Paris public transportation, and caused discomfort to big-city workers deprived of their usual means of getting to work.

But most of them got to work, even though it meant riding bicycles, walking, or hitching rides on the backs of trucks.

Neither the Ministry of the Interior nor the the labor unions made any estimate of the number who actually obeyed strike orders. But private estimates ranged from 2,500,000 to three million of the 4,700,000 ordered to strike.

Pact Might Outdo A-Bomb—Bradley

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said yesterday the North Atlantic Pact might do more toward deterring Russian aggression than did the atom bomb.

His statement, broadcast by the State Department's Voice of America, also said the pact nation's military committee had developed a plan upon which to base the collective security of the 12 nations involved. Bradley will leave for Paris today for a meeting of the committee, of which he is a member, next week.

After making it plain that the was "neither minimizing nor underestimating the tremendous force for peace that the atomic weapon has been, Bradley declared:

"It is certainly fair to say that the North Atlantic Treaty organization of 12 nations gives promise of being an even greater deterrent to aggression."

Argentine Deputy Disputes Press Check

Buenos Aires, Nov. 25 (AP).—A dispute cropped up today among members of a congressional investigating committee over the authority of investigators to visit newspaper and news agency offices to gather information for a political inquiry.

J. Anibal Davila, Radical deputy and one of three minority members, said a subcommittee's visits to the offices were not only unauthorized, but had been carried out without consultation with the full committee.

Reds Say Allies Reestablish Nazi Police; Plan to Cut Troops

London, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Radio Moscow charged today that the Western powers have reestablished Nazi police forces and other military units in Western Germany totalling 470,000 men.

This is 110,000 more men than the West has credited the Russians with rearming in East Germany.

West German units, the English-language commentator asserted, are equipped "with tommy-guns, carbines and machineguns, while many of them also have artillery, armored cars and armored troop-transporting vehicles."

In Berlin, the official Soviet Army newspaper, Taegliche Rundchau, said the Soviet Union is trying to reduce the number of Russians in East Germany and wants to withdraw its occupation troops.

Burma Rebels Wound Airline Pilot From U. S.

Rangoon, Burma, Nov. 25 (U.P.). James L. Harper, American chief pilot for Air Burma Airlines, was wounded seriously today when insurgent troops fired at his Dakota plane 30 miles north of here.

Harper managed to land his plane at Mandalay. He was taken to hospital with wounds in his groin and feet.

British Reds Cued

Liverpool England (Saturday), Nov. 26 (AP).—Britain's Communists were told today to vote for Labor Party candidates in the 1950 general election wherever none of their own is running.

The order was contained in a political report of the British Communist Party which pictured Soviet Russia as a peace-seeking paradise and Britain as the junior partner of the United States in a campaign to dominate the world.

Police In Panama

Any illusion that last Sunday's revolution in Panama followed a "constitutional" pattern ought to be dispelled by what has happened since. The whim of a military strong man has ridden roughshod over the will of the National Assembly and the Supreme Court, and the legal government is on the skids. In its stead a man with a long record of anti-Americanism and trouble-making in Central America has been pushed into the Presidency.

Dr. Arnulfo Arias, who comes to power through a deal with Col. Jose Remon, the chief of the Panamanian police, has a checkered and unsavory record. As President of Panama during the period prior to Pearl Harbor, he was an unabashed admirer of Hitler and totalitarian methods. Removed by a coup in October, 1941, he spent most of the war in exile, largely in Argentina. After the war, however, he returned to politics on a program of "Panama for the Panamanians." There is a well-founded suspicion that he was linked with the disturbances over American bases at the end of 1947. Following his defeat in the 1948 presidential election, he was thrown out of Costa Rica for attempting to organize an invasion army. From the standpoint of this country's vital interest in the Panama Canal, there scarcely could be a worse man at Panama's helm.

One effect of this unhappy chain of events is to cast considerable doubt on the sort of intervention to which United States Ambassador Monnett B. Davis was a party. Upon learning of Colonel Remon's intention to oust President Daniel Chanis, members of the Diplomatic Corps went to Remon and persuaded him not to use force. The State Department commended Mr. Davis for his correct conduct, and the department seemed pleased that there was no constitutional or recognition question, since Dr. Chanis' successor was to be the vice president, Roberto Chiari. However, well-intentioned this interference, the effect was to give a fillip to Remon's machinations.

Now, of course, Chiari has been deposed along with Chanis, and the result is quite as disastrous as if force had been used. Dr. Arias is either a pawn of Remon or a demagogue who thinks in similar terms, and Assistant Secretary of State Miller properly has indicated this country's profound shock at the overthrow. What all this emphasizes is that there can be no compromise on grounds of expediency with any subversion of representative government. Sooner or later the countries of this hemisphere are going to have to come to a common policy for dealing with such coups, for in the overthrow of another elected government the whole cause of solidarity and stability has been injured.

Ghosts In The Closet

Ghost-writing has always been a shoddy business, but now the Supreme Court appears to have made it something for which otherwise respectable attorneys may be barred from the practice of their profession. The 80-year-old Vernon M. Dorsey has been disbarred from practicing before the Patent Office for not telling that office that he had ghosted an article which he had submitted in support of his particular application. The decision raises questions of earth-shaking significance in this paradise of literary ghosts.

Even the dissenters, Justices Jackson and Frankfurter, show they have not the slightest sympathy with the practitioners of this ancient art. Take, for instance, Justice Jackson:

> I should not like to be second to anyone on this Court in condemning the custom of putting up decoy authors to impress the guileless, a custom which as the court below cruelly pointed out flourishes even in official circles in Washington. Nor do I contend that Dorsey's special adaptation of the prevailing custom comports with the highest candor. Ghost-writing has debased the intellectual currency in circulation here and is a type of counterfeit which invites no defense. Perhaps this Court renders a public service in treating phantom authors and ghost-writers as legal frauds and disguised authorship as a deception. But has any man before Dorsey ever been disciplined or even reprimanded for it? And will any be hereafter?

It is this latter question that gives the case its significance. The Supreme Court has made itself the foe of discrimination. In view of that, the question arises on the heels of the Monday decision: can it countenance the disbarment of a lawyer for not telling the Patent Office that an article submitted to it was ghost-written and at the same time uphold the right of countless authors, statesmen, politicians, soldiers, labor leaders and business executives to dress their thoughts in borrowed eloquence? Logic, of course, says no. But let the literary ghosts of Washington put away their fears. The Supreme Court knows its place. It will never strain a linchpin of jurisdiction, to use Mr. Justice Frankfurter's phrase, by attacking ghosting in general. In other words, there will be no disbarments at the bar of public opinion.

What we deduce from the situation is this: The granting of patents is so important that the law and the courts must not permit a lawyer to ghost an article without disclosing the fact. It is in the relatively unimportant field of announcing the major policies of the Nation that ghosting is to retain full sanction and esteem. The foundations of the Republic are thus saved—also the faces of innumerable functionaries. A wonderful device is the division of powers!

Relaxing In Germany

The events that have occurred in Germany in the last 18 months have followed a pattern that should have been discernible when the six Western powers decided on June 7, 1948, to set up a government for Western Germany. This was a fateful adventure in crisis diplomacy—described at the time as an "answer" to the Russian "challenge" in Germany. The fact was that the agreement stopped in its tracks the process of finding a European solution for Germany and opened a Pandora's box of fresh problems in and not about Germany. This newspaper said that "the day will be rued, we venture to say, that the United States engineered this unfortunate enterprise"; that Russia would invite the Western powers to quit Berlin and that a crisis would be provoked there; that the agreement "looks to a revival of German nationalism," and that the Russians would try to outsmart the West by setting up a unity government in Berlin. These results came one on top of another up till the establishment on October 7 of what is derisively called Pieckestan in Eastern Germany, so-called from the name of the Russian puppet President, Wilhelm Pieck.

Pieckestan was the causa causans of the meeting early this month of Messrs. Acheson, Bevin, and Schuman. The Russian dupe was beginning to hurt Western relations with Western Germany. That is to say, the West Germans at Bonn were using the bargaining club against the West which the Russians had provided in the shape of Pieckestan. For instance, the antidismantling campaign had increased in virulence. Of all the three statesmen, Mr. Bevin was feeling the most pressure. That was because most of the plants were located in the British zone and the British had been unconscionably laggard, anyway. The hurry-up call to confer that came from Mr. Bevin resulted in an agreement which has now been incorporated in an agreement between the High Commission in Germany and Chancellor Adenauer. It represents Western concessions on dismantling and in the direction of independence and statehood in return for German membership of the Ruhr Authority and pledges to be good, including permanent demilitarization of the Reich.

It is clear, however, that this agreement is only a beginning in concessions which Pieckestan has accelerated. From now on Eastern Germany will make the pace; from now on the initiative will belong to the East. Already a slow squeeze is going on in the western sectors of the city of Berlin which makes the victory of the airlift look more and more Pyrrhic. We are not demeaning the amazing success of the airlift when we say this. But the success is now forgotten and the price remains. The price was a total eclipse of diplomacy in building up a European community and a turning inward of German eyes and a spur to German nationalism. The next Russian step will probably be the overt arming of Eastern Germany. In all likelihood there will then be another hurry-up call for a ministerial conference to deal with it and make a countermove.

Vision there needs to be, and nowadays in large doses. The European solution needs to be found, and quickly; or the seeds of war will sprout again, and the last state will be worse than the first. American diplomacy erred badly in sponsoring the 1948 agreement on Germany. But in recent months there has been a spirited American move to switch back to Europeanization the trend which was then set in motion, and Europe cannot complain of lack of American leadership in this new direction. Alas, the leadership is not leading, at least at any substantial gait. For instance, only two nations have as yet come forward to negotiate a bilateral agreement on the arms pact, in spite of the fact that the President signed MAP on October 6.

Clemency Appeal

It must have come as rather a surprise to a good many people that former Representative Andrew J. May asked District Court here the other day to reduce or suspend the 8-to-24-month prison term to which he was sentenced in 1947. The element of surprise stems not so much from Mr. May's presumptuousness, which is nothing new, as from the revelation that he has managed to remain at liberty throughout the 2½ years since his conviction.

You will recall, if you happen to have a long memory, that Mr. May, wartime chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, was found guilty of accepting $53,734 in bribes from Murray Garrson and Dr. Henry M. Garsson who, through his friendly intervention with Army procurement officers, parlayed a business which at first was no more than a letterhead into a munitions empire holding 78 million dollars in Government contracts. The Garssons, along with Mr. May, got convictions for conspiracy as well as for bribery.

All three appealed, as of course they had every right to do, first to the Court of Appeals here, which upheld the District Court conviction, then to the Supreme Court, which sustained the Court of Appeals by refusing to review the case. Meanwhile the convicted men were free on $2000 bond each. The former Congressman has been drawing a monthly pension of $278.

The delays available to them under the law having now been exhausted, the Garssons and Mr. May are supposed to appear in District Court on Monday to be ordered to begin serving their sentences. They have entered a plea for reduction or suspension of these sentences or to be placed on probation. In support of their plea, they have argued that they rendered valuable war service, that they have already suffered grave losses in money and reputation and, in respect of Mr. May, that he is old and ailing. We do not suppose that society will gain anything from additional punishment of Mr. May; he can no longer do any harm. But it would be a grave misfortune if it were to appear that he succeeded in escaping the punishment duly meted out to him by reason of his position and influence. His position was one of high trust. He abused it shamefully and his conduct is the more reprehensible and the less entitled to leniency on that account. It is difficult to temper justice with mercy in such a case.

Loss Of Mr. Clifford

Clark M. Clifford's forthcoming resignation as special counsel to the President is reported to be another case in which the field of private activity appears to be greener than the Government service. Apparently Mr. Clifford went into debt on the $12,000 salary that he had received until Congress gave him an $8000 increase at its last session. While the new salary would probably enable him to live comfortably and gradually pay his debts, Mr. Clifford is said to be not satisfied with any such slow progress in recouping his fortune.

His prospective resignation thus reflects upon the procrastination of Congress in increasing the salaries of top administrative officials. At the same time it seems to us absurd to say, as the Alsop brothers have done, that Mr. Clifford is leaving the public service because "the Clifford family cannot, or at least will not, eat roots." The salary of $20,000, which Congress voted for two of the President's staff of assistants, seems to us quite adequate.. Of course, the Government cannot pay the high salaries that top executives are frequently able to command in private industry or match the fees that a first-class lawyer may be able to earn. Men who go into public life can expect only salaries that will enable them to live comfortably. There are other compensations and perquisites that often count for more than salary in keeping men in high office.

For many reasons Mr. Clifford's prospective departure is indeed regrettable. He has sought unceasingly to make the Government jell. He has supplied the sort of talent that President Truman especially needs. But it is not to be supposed that he is irreplaceable, and Mr. Clifford, being a well-balanced person, would be the first to say so. The idea that he is a kind of superman who has shaped White House policies in addition to writing White House speeches is largely myth. Mr. Clifford has undoubtedly contributed much to President Truman's thinking as well as to his eloquence in public addresses. But the fact of the matter is that the White House is an institution which draws upon the intellects and talents of many individuals. No single person can attend to all its chores and generate all the ideas that an administration must necessarily have to keep abreast of its task. The President's chief function is to keep his numerous aides, advisers and Cabinet members functioning in a manner satisfactory to himself.

The preparation of a presidential speech, for example, is not a matter of a gifted aide sitting down and writing an address for the President to read in public. The President himself indicates the general content and tenor of the speech he wishes to make. His aides go to work on research and drafting, with the President then criticizing and ordering revisions to meet his wishes. A speech sometimes goes through as many as 12 drafts before Mr. Truman is satisfied with it. Mr. Clifford's talent for this kind of work and his indefatigable industry have made him an especially valuable aide, but we have no doubt that the presidential institution will continue to function in the usual manner without him.

DP Report

The second semiannual report of the Displaced Persons Commission is not so much an accounting as an indictment. It lays bare, as indeed it had to do in candor and conscience, the "overly complicated, unjust, unfair and discriminatory" features of the statute under which the commission was established and operates. And it recommends "the earliest possible enactment" of the amendments passed by the House but lamentably recommitted by the Senate in the last session of Congress.

"A task worth doing at all," the commission's report concludes, "is worth doing well." The commission is entitled to the claim it makes that it "is striving toward as efficient an administration of the law as possible, and to be as just as an unjust law permits." But it is simply not going to be able to bring into this country even the 205,000 displaced persons authorized by the existing law within a two-year period. It has been so hamstrung by restrictions, limitations, preferences and priorities stipulated in the statute that it cannot focus on its essential business of transporting and resettling refugees.

"Mr. Byrnes' Challenge"

Would the editors of The Washington Post consider an opportunity to bet $1 against a million dollars in support of the editorial statement ("Mr. Byrnes' Challenge," November 23) that Mr. Byrnes' speeches "suggest that he has now definitely made up his mind to run for the governorship of South Carolina against Gov. J. Strom Thurmond?"

No credit is reflected on the generally erudite and distinguished editorial page of The Washington Post by the failure of its authors to check simple facts. It is generally known, not only in South Carolina but among political observers elsewhere, that Governor Thurmond is contemplating opposing Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) next year.

But even were that not true, Governor Thurmond cannot run next year for the governorship. The South Carolina constitution prohibits a Governor from succeeding himself.

As a matter of accuracy, the chances are that Mr. Byrnes will run for the governorship and that Governor Thurmond will run for the Senate and that their candidacies will be linked, inevitably, in the minds of the people of that State as a "States' Rights Democratic" or "Dixiecratic" ticket for the State's two top offices.

Public College

It has been proposed that a junior college be created for the District of Columbia. New teachers' colleges must be constructed to replace both Minor and Wilson Teachers' Colleges due to congestion.

Since all progressive citizens desire to promote better human relations, many are proposing the introduction of such courses in our public schools. In order that teachers can properly impart to the youth the necessity for fair treatment and equal opportunities to all citizens without discrimination, they must be themselves indoctrinated with the idea.

The teacher must first be educated to respect the capabilities and personalities of everyone without consideration of race, religion or color. The best place to obtain this training is in the atmosphere of a college where there is no discrimination, no segregation. I therefore propose that a public college be created for the citizens of the District of Columbia to replace both Wilson and Minor Teachers' colleges and also that it have courses preparatory for the professions available to all citizens without discrimination.

"Washington's Traffic"

In commenting on your November 17 editorial regarding Washington's traffic problems, a correspondent on November 21 expresses the belief that "one of the soundest plans would be to bar all parking, except during actual delivery of supplies, in the downtown area . . ."

As a suburban driver who has to leave for work very early as it is, my spirit sags at the suggestion that "those living at real distances could drive in and continue by the buses." My outlook brightens, however, when I learn that "even business would profit, for housewives . . . would not be compelled to circle and circle in hope of finding space for parking."

But tell me: Under the rules of the game, by what kind of four-dimensional juxtapositioning could this particular class of mortals discover a legal place to park among the miles and miles of vacantly enticing but nonetheless illegal spots?

Crommelin's Message

It appears that we have another Ben Franklin or Patrick Henry in our country in the person of Captain Crommelin, a true patriot if there ever was one. For if we want freedom we must ever be vigilant.

Speaking of the captain's stand, Senator McCarthy says: "Captain Crommelin feels and I agree that our chiefs of staff are going the German high command one better in attempting to take over the complete control of the Nation's economy."

If this is true, and I also believe that all is not well with the way we are behaving nationally, then we must awake and demand a court-martial for Captain Crommelin with reporters present to give the facts to our people.

Howard Players

The Nation's Capital without a democratic, non-Jim-Crow downtown theater presents a sorry spectacle indeed now that the Howard University Players are returning from abroad full of honors from their triumphal tour but without a theater here in which they can be seen.

Drew Pearson suggests that the Howard Players present here one of the Ibsen plays which have made them internationally famous in Scandinavia and Germany—but where, that is the $64 question. Richard Coe makes the suggestion that the play be presented in Lisner Auditorium. But Mr. Coe can't be serious, not after the long history of Jim-Crow there.

Why not try one of the many Federal Government auditoriums in Washington? In them, at least, Negroes have always been first-class citizens, and not just for a day by special permission of the trustees of George Washington University.

Why not use, to be specific, the beautiful Thomas Jefferson Memorial Auditorium of the United States Department of Agriculture? With the finest symphony orchestra in town next to the National Symphony, a fine 70-voice mixed chorus and a dramatic organization all supported and sponsored by its employes the department could well act as host—with clean hands and a clear conscience.

"Case Of The A. & P."

I am very much interested in Ysabel and Robert Rennie's article of November 22 on the "Case of the A&P."

Our reason for taking exception to statements in the article is just this—violation of the Federal law took place in the case in question and the defendant, A&P, was found guilty of criminal action, both by the lower and higher Federal courts. So, as the article states, "the case shakes down to this: A&P has competed so fiercely that it has beaten down profit margins at all levels . . . and it has passed the savings on to the consumer."

Are we to understand that fierce competition is to be accepted by the American public, and welcomed by the American public if the competition is brought about through violations, and consistent violations of Federal laws? If this is to be the feeling of the American people then we have arrived at a new philosophy.

Apparently the A&P company believes it must be beyond the law. I cite a recent statement by the Assistant Attorney General in which he said: "In January of 1938 an order was issued directing A&P to cease and desist from its practice of demanding discriminatory rebates and price preferences. The United States Court of Appeals upheld the order and the Supreme Court refused to consider A&P's appeal. Yet in the criminal antitrust case the Federal courts found beyond all reasonable doubt that, as a matter of deliberate policy and in flagrant disregard of the 1938 order, A&P had continued to extort such price preferences from its sources of supply."

From the very first instant the National Federation of Independent Business has held to the premise that if our free enterprise system is to be maintained this can only be brought about through an all out sincere vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws. The federation's position was stated publicly before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report on July 14, 1947. Its position was again publicly stated before the Capehart Committee on December 6, 1948, opposing any laws amending the Supreme Court's decision in the basing point case where antitrust law violations were involved. Then again, the federation's position was publicly stated before the House Small Business Committee on November 17, 1948.

In 1936 the Congress approved the Robinson-Patman Act. The over-all intent of the act was to protect the free enterprise system and prohibit price preferentials, secret rebates, etc., given to the few and denied to the many.

The A&P Co. was not convicted of its bigness. A&P was not convicted because it was efficient or enterprising. A&P was convicted of violating the antitrust laws. Why should there be any sympathy for convicted criminals?

I think the federation in its recent national advertisement stated the premise clearly and understandably when it said "The law is made for all. If you ruthlessly drive your automobile in such a manner that you injure other people, and other people's property, you might well be found guilty of reckless driving. And if you're found guilty on criminal charges, you can't protest if you are made a defendant in a civil action. You'll get no public sympathy, and no one will say, least of all you, that you're being persecuted. Does the great A&P think it is greater than the individual American?"

It is our hope and trust that the Government will proceed with all haste in bringing this necessary case to a just conclusion and that the Federal Government will use its every effort in similar actions in all segments of our economy where antitrust laws are deliberately violated.

Vice President, National Federation of Independent Business.

New Crop Of Leaders

By Malvina Lindsay

Campus Prospects

TODAY'S TYPICAL political leader is well in his 50s or even 60s. A generation hence he may be older, since the tide of the elderly is rising. Yet when the Republic was founded its leaders had an average age of 45.

The need of younger men and women in public life to balance the mounting power of the oldsters is heard on all sides. Youth will need to get into politics earlier and more aggressively if it hopes to pit its confidence and initiative against the ripened judgment and conservatism of age—which eventually will have numbers on its side.

Yet youth, according to news dispatches, is busy getting arrested for drunken driving or is engaging in postfootball game melees. Or else it is looking for a job that guarantees a pension at 55.

However, there is another side to this picture. Part of it is on exhibit this weekend at Georgetown University. There, 350 students from 160 colleges are discussing in round tables what this country should do to ease the troubled spots of the world. The general topic is "The United States and World Policy."

"IF YOU SHUT your eyes, you might think it was Congressmen talking"—such was the tribute paid these discussions by a veteran listener to public argument. For these boys and girls, delegates from the International Relations Clubs of colleges of the Middle Atlantic region, have been thoroughly trained in the American give and take of discussion, and also have done much boning up on their subjects.

Such regional conferences, now being held throughout the United States, hold promise of a new, vigorous crop of political leaders. In addition, campuses have other organized groups grappling with big subjects, including those working for world government.

Recent adult visitors to college campuses, especially those in the Middle West, have been impressed by the vigor with which student organizations have been wading into world affairs. These visitors report a great political and cultural vitality on campuses and the "feel" of leadership in the making.

Forty-three young Germans recently brought here to observe youth leadership were generally amazed at the outspoken discussion they found "even of the most ticklish and disagreeable problems," and at the "spontaneity and poise of young people" and their good relations with their elders.

It is true these boys and girls discussing American foreign policy at Georgetown University this Thanksgiving weekend, and those who lead the "world" movements on their campuses, constitute a minute part of the college population. But they may be the "creative minority" that Historian Toynbee says must always be depended upon to meet the challenges nations and civilizations face.

IT IS ALSO true the great mass of students and other young people may be chiefly concerned with safe jobs and security rather than the adventure of politics. President Paul M. Limbert of Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., recently answered this charge by pointing out that the mass of people have always sought safe lives and that "we have always had to depend on a small creative minority for leadership."

One criticism of campus leadership is that it is too largely concerned with world affairs and neglects national problems. Yet many college authorities encourage the world rather than the national approach to economics and politics so there will be less danger that boards of regents or legislatures may be rubbed the wrong way. However, interest of college students in the study of economics and political science is great and is growing.

Yet a weak spot in the building of young political leaders is the high school. The Joint Council on Economic Education reports that the Nation's high school students are "ignorant of the economic facts of life." Not more than 5 percent of the boys and girls leaving high school, the report says, have received adequate instruction in economics.

While most political leadership now comes from those with college educations, there are many what educators call "top brains" in high school who are kept out of college by lack of money. If these students were given more encouragement in economic and political study, they might be able later by self-education to fit themselves for public leadership. After all, we have a noncollege president who did that.

No UMW Revolt

For sheer imagery and the picturing of a make-believe world, Jules Verne has a peer in Drew Pearson. Verne told of twenty thousand leagues under the sea without ever going near the place. Drawing upon his own artistic resources, and apparently without once talking to a coal miner or visiting the coal fields, Pearson is able to write of the "revolt" by coal miners against the United Mine Workers.

There is a difference between Verne and Pearson, however. Pearson is funnier. My congratulations to you for your acumen in placing him on the funny page.

Iron-Curtain Trade

By Marquis Childs

Need For An Economic GHQ

PARIS.—Trying to reconstruct the economy of Europe is like trying to put together a very complicated puzzle. What makes it all the more difficult is that some of the pieces are missing.

Childs

A confidential study has just been made which shows western Europe's deficiencies in trade with the rest of the world. The biggest hole is in trade with eastern Europe. Imports from eastern Europe have been running at a rate more than two billion dollars a year less than the prewar level.

This means that grain, wood, petroleum, coal, are not coming from the normal area of supply in anything like the pre-1939 volume. As a consequence, western Europe uses dollars to buy these essential commodities in North America.

The issue of East-West trade rises constantly to plague both Americans and Europeans in this strange era when the world is neither at peace nor war. The French entered into lengthy trade negotiations with the Russians seeking certain raw materials, among them petroleum, in return for manufactured goods.

The deal fell through, according to one report, because the Russians wanted tankers in return for which they would deliver several million tons of petroleum. But tankers are high up on the secret list of articles which are not to be sent through the iron curtain. While the list was compiled under the direction of the National Security Council in Washington, it now bears the French and British stamp of approval if only so that America will not be in the position of dictating what sovereign European nations may or may not ship to Russia and the satellites.

QUITE apart from the secret list, which is short but detailed, there are doubts whether the curtain countries can supply the commodities sought in the West. The political upheaval taking place behind the barrier has caused serious economic dislocation.

In spite of the prohibition enforced by the list some forbidden items are getting through. They are sent to firms in Switzerland, Sweden, Egypt or wherever, and then after they are transhipped two or three times they end up in Soviet Russia or a sattellite. This is true especially of ball-bearings and diamond dies.

How large the volume of these leaks is no one seems to know. Rumors are constantly circulating and now and then they are proved authentic. Naturally, the physical volume is small, since it would be hard to get away with circuitously transshipping a steel mill.

But this seems to me to point up one of the major deficiencies in the American approach to the world. We are woefully weak on economic intelligence and, even more important, what to do with that intelligence when we get it.

While the raw material of economic intelligence may flow into Washington, it is not properly coordinated. Or, to put it another way, no one with sufficient authority appraises the reports that come in and then makes the essential decisions.

What may be necessary is a sort of economic GHQ. Such a group or board might well be attached to the Security Council. It would have broad powers to act within the scope of American policy and to make recommendations where American authority ended.

NO ONE today, for example, has any very sure knowledge about the net effect of trade between the statellites and the West. Does it increase their military potential more than it increases the military-economic potential of the West?

An economic GHQ with proper authority should be able to answer that question. And if it were found that a particular curtain country was actually gaining more, then steps would be taken to revise the terms of this trade. Admittedly, this would be difficult since a great many sensitive toes would be stepped on.

But without it we are operating in the dark. Last winter when the counterblockade was imposed on East Germany, a shipment of 22,000 tons of iron pyrites from Norway into the Russian zone was approved. This was done so that potash could be purchased cheaply in East Germany to send to Southern Korea. I doubt if any economic GHQ would have approved such a deal, since the pyrites were essential to keep even a low level of industry going in Russia's section of Germany.

Such an economic GHQ would constantly resurvey the secret list. Perhaps it doesn't make sense to prohibit certain items on the list when the west European countries that make those items cannot sell them elsewhere and when the commodities to be got in exchange must be purchased with scarce or nonexistent dollars. If through a firm, resolute use of our economic power we can help to keep the peace, then it's high time we started using it with all possible skill and capacity.

Truce Effort Reported in Philippines

Manila, Phillippines, Saturday, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Gov. Feliciano Leviste arrived here today to seek peace for Batangas Province, where partisans of defeated presidential candidate Jose P. Laurel have been battling crack constabulary troops for a week.

Even as Leviste reached here at the head of a delegation composed of provincial mayors, Air Force planes opened a bombing and strafing attack on the partisans entrenched in hills 50 miles south of Manila.

Brig. Gen. Alberto Ramos, commander in chief of the constabulary, said that F-51 Mustang fighter-bombers roared into action, seeking to blast the rebels out of the rocky strongholds.

Laurel, former Jap puppet Premier, regards Batangas as his home bailiwick, although he has lived in Manila for many years. Police even searched his home Friday night, apparently looking for leaders of the rebellion, found nothing and left.

The United Press said last night Philippine constabularymen searched the home of Laurel, apparently seeking leaders of the uprising in Batangas.

(Laurel remained in his study while constabularymen searched his home.)

Red Invasion Of Tibet Held As Certain

London, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—The Chinese Communists are training a corps of Tibetans in northwest China in apparent preparation for an invasion of Tibet, British experts said tonight.

These experts believe a Communist invasion of Tibet, long feared, now is certain as the result of the Peiping radio statement that the exiled boy Panchen Lama, one of Tibet's "living gods," had asked them to "liberate" his country.

According to reports reaching London the Chinese Communists have recruited about 40,000 Tibetans and are training them near the border.

British authorities say they are more worried over the Tibetan situation than over a possible Communist attack on Hongkong. They fear that India, on Tibet's south, might feel the repercusions from Communist capture of the mountain country.

Ex-Adviser to Chiang Discounts Red 'Threat'

Towson, Md., Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Owen J. Lattimore, one-time political adviser to Chiang Kai-shek, today said he thinks the Communist "threat" to Tibet is vastly overrated.

He said that the isolated, mountainous "Shangri-La" is of almost no strategic value militarily.

Deficit Financing

By Mark Sullivan

'Economic Welfare' For The Few

THE PHRASE "general economic welfare" has come to be used by Administration spokesmen as justification for many of its policies. An example is a statement by Secretary of the Treasury Snyder the other day: "The general economic welfare of the country should be the guiding principle in determining for any given period whether the Federal budget should be balanced . . ."

Sullivan

This, if read in connection with other statements by Administration spokesmen, and the general attitude of the Administration, seems to imply an arresting inference. It is that neither next year nor in any series of years, "any given period," is balancing of the budget an imperative requirement of Government. The paramount standard is "the general economic welfare of the country."

The same phrase, or equivalents of it, is used to justify several Administration policies. A variant described as increasing the purchasing power of the country underlay the policies of wage raises for labor which President Truman put forward soon after the war. And maintaining the purchasing power of the country is put forward as justification for supporting the income of farmers, by subsidies and Government support of prices of crops.

THE GENERAL economic welfare of the country was plead by President Truman as justification for several new forms of expenditure by the Government included in his legislative program for the recent session of Congress. Increase of income as a contribution to the general economic welfare of the country underlies two recent utterances by President Truman. One was: "We can establish an income level in the country of $4000 per family a year." The other was an expectation held out that the total national income can be increased by 75 billion dollars, over the present national income of 225 billion, and in addition to an increase during the past 10 years of some 125 billion.

"The general economic welfare of the country" is a persuasive phrase. But it calls for analysis and understanding. The economic welfare cannot be "general" unless it applies to all classes. Spokesmen for the Truman Administration, in defense of their policies, quote a phrase from the Constitution, "promote the general welfare." But what the writers of the Constitution meant was the welfare of all the people, of the country as a whole, as a unit. They would be surprised at the use of their words to justify some of the policies of the present Administration which are for class welfare.

One very large class of the people—the largest class, indeed including practically all the people—consists of the persons who are providing for their future economic welfare by putting money into various forms of security, or for whom this is being done by others, in several cases by the Government. What these will receive when their security comes due is in most cases what is called "fixed income," it is a specific number of dollars.

They will not receive any or much of the increase in wages, for at the time they receive their security income they will in most cases have ceased to be wage-earners by reason of old age. Their income will not be increased by Government policies which increase wages or which support the prices of crops, which is food. On the contrary, increase of wages and high prices for farm crops will work to their detriment. Their income in dollars will be fixed, and the cost of what they buy will be increased.

THE NUMBER of persons thus affected is immense. Allowing for duplications it amounts to practically all the people. Groups of them include:

Holders of life insurance policies. There are some 78 million of these.

Beneficiaries of social security. The number of these last June was some 34 million; it will be increased with the beginning of next year.

Holders of Government bonds, especially small-payment war saving bonds. At the peak in 1944 there were some 85 million of these.

Beneficiaries of various forms of pensions, Government or otherwise. The number of these is increasing, through adoption of pension systems in recent agreements between industries and workers.

A frequent form of pensions provides payments of fixed amounts, such as $100 a month or so after the beneficiaries reach 65 years of age. All these groups will always receive the number of dollars they are promised. But the actual security they receive will depend on whether the Government avoids policies that would increase the future cost of what they must buy.

The "general economic welfare of the country" is hardly general unless it includes the immense number of people who depend upon various forms of future security. And future security can be really security only if the Government remains solvent, avoiding excessive increase of the Government debt

Two Representatives Uphold U. S. Handling of Ward Case

Two Democratic lawmakers yesterday upheld the State Department's handling of the Angus Ward case, taking sharp issue with Republican criticism.

Ward, United States Consul General at Mukden, China, was released this week from a Communist jail where he had been held nearly a month. Four other consulate employes, also jailed, were set free. All were ordered to get out of the country, but it is not yet known when or how this will be done.

Representative Price (D., Ill.) and Representative Mansfield (D., Mont.) said that if the State Department had followed a course of action suggested by some Republican thinking Ward would still be in jail and the United States probably would be at war. They told reporters the important thing is that Ward has been released.

Five Republican members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee issued a statement Thursday calling the State Department's performance "spineless" and a "by-product of the incredibly botched China policy which our Government has pursued for the last four years." It said "firm action" months ago would have achieved results.

The Republican statement was signed by Representatives Judd (R., Minn.), Chiperfield of Illinois, Vorys of Ohio, Jackson of California and Lawrence H. Smith of Wisconsin.

Knowland Visits Chiang in Chungking

Chungking, China, Nov. 25 (A.P.).—Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) arrived in this Red-threatened capital tonight and had a long talk with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and retired Maj. Gen. It was believed that Chiang outlined Nationalist plans to continue the civil war and that he gave Knowland some idea of military and financial needs. Knwoland advocates renewed American aid to the Nationalists.

Winship, a veteran diplomat career officer who calls Macon, Ga., home, gave no reason for his resignation which President Truman accepted with regret.

The resignation is effective on a date to be established on his return to the United States.

and a "most serious blow" to the good-neighbor policy.)

Arias took office despite a Supreme Court ruling that Dr. Daniel F. Chanis, jr., unseated by the police last Saturday, was still legal president of Panama. Chanis was succeeded by Roberto Chiari, who was sworn in Sunday, and who was replaced yesterday by Arias.

Remon and his two deputy chiefs of police told Arias they were willing to resign if he wanted them to. Arias did not comment on the offer in a brief speech he made at national police headquarters where he received a formal pledge of "unanimous support."

Chiari said today he was maintaining "neutrality" in the presidential issue.

Although Arias had the indorsement of Police Chief Remon and his forces, the political situation still was far from settled. Workers were demanding that Remon and his aides be removed and hit at police operation of vital public services.

After Arias was sworn into office, Alcibiades Arosemena took the oath as first vice president and Jose Ramon Guizado as second vice president. Arias immediately named an eight-man cabinet in which at least five ministers are his close political associates. The cabinet included:

Interior and Justice, Alfredo Aleman; foreign affairs, Carlos N. Brin; agriculture, Ricardo M. Arias; education, Max Arosemena; treasury, Alcibiades Arosemena; labor, Ricardo Rivera; public workers, Norberto Navarro; secretary general with cabinet rank, Jose Clemente Obaldia.

The United States made it clear yesterday that it did not recognize the Panama government of Dr. Arnulfo Arias, who seized the presidency on Thursday with the help of the National Police.

The State Department's response came in a stern statement from Assistant Secretary Edward G. Miller, in charge of Latin American affairs. Miller said the police had made Arias president in spite of the fact that the national assembly and the supreme court had confirmed Dr. Daniel Chanis as the rightful and legally elected chief executive.

"Our reaction to this disregard of the decision of duly elected authority is one of profound shock," said Miller. "These events in Panama cannot but be a most serious blow to democratic procedures and to the inter-American system in general."

He told reporters that "diplomatic relations do not now exist" with the Arias regime, and that United States Ambassador Monnett B. Davis would simply have the status of an observer for the time being.

Future recognition, he indicated, would depend on events in Panama and on consultations with other American republics.

Arias, a graduate of the Harvard Medical School, is no stranger to official Washington. He was president once before, from October, 1940, to October, 1941, and during that time clashed often with the United States. He was accused of Nazi sympathies, suppressed the free press, and generally got the reputation of being a bad and troublesome neighbor.

After being disposed in 1941 he fled to exile in Buenos Aires, and was arrested on his return to Panama after the war. Lately his name was mentioned as an instigator of an invasion of Panama from neighboring Costa Rica.

China Accuses Soviet Union

single plane to give me even if it wished."

Soviet Minister Andrei Vishinsky interrupted Dr. Tsiang as the Chinese delegate cleared his throat to start his 60-page, 17,000-word speech. He said the "provocative" subject could not be discussed because it was submitted by "fictitious representatives of a fictitious government" that did not speak for the people of China.

Vishinsky said the Kuomintang government held a "small shred" of China, "which will be liberated in a few days." He said Russia "will not participate in the consideration of this item and will not take into any consideration any decision reached."

Shortly after Dr. Tsiang started documenting his charges against Russia, Vishinsky and most of his delegation left the committee room, leaving Yakov Malik, deputy Soviet Foreign Minister, who, with his earphones dangling around his neck, read a newspaper and paid no attention to the speaker.

The other satellites likewise trimmed their delegations to one indifferent member as they carried out the threat to boycott the debate.

Dr. Tsing charged that Russia obstructed the efforts of the Chinese government to take over Manchuria and deliberately permitted Communist forces to use strategic bases in that country.

He said the Soviets actively supported the Chinese Communists militarily, economically and morally with vast stores of captured Japanese arms and military supplies.

The Gallup Poll

Most Americans Believe Germany Would Fight for U. S.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 25.—Public attitudes toward Germany have undergone a remarkable change since the night in May, 1945, when the Nazis surrendered.

Today the weight of sentiment throughout the country is that Western Germany would actually fight on our side. Occupied Western Germany today is generally looked upon as an ally, a Gallup Poll discloses.

Voters throughout the Nation were asked:

"If there is another world war, do you think the new Western Germany will fight on the side of the United States or against the United States?"

The vote:

With us	43%
Against us	32
No opinion	25

The more educated voters, those who have had some college training, are more optimistic than others about German cooperation with the United States. Here is the vote by education groups:

	College	High Sch'l	Grade Sch'l
With us	50%	46%	38%
Against us	25	30	35

How Rome Is Readying Itself for the Holy Year

Gervasi

Early on December 24, Pope Pius XII and his cardinals will inaugurate the 27th Catholic Holy Year, the first such year since 1933.

Post correspondent Frank Gervasi is in Rome observing preparations for this solemn event. In a timely Sunday Post story, he describes its significance, the anticipatory atmosphere in the city and the conditions which 4,000,000 Holy Year Pilgrims will find there.

Read Gervasi's vivid, on-the-spot preview account this Sunday in The Washington Post.

Methodists Working On Nativity Pageant

Preparations for "The Living Nativity," Arlington Forest Methodist Church's "Christmas card to the community," are already under way.

Last year's presentation of the pageant was so successful that the church plans to make it an annual event.

For three hours on December 22, 23, 24 and on Christmas night the tableau, portraying the scene in the Bethlehem stable on the night of Christ's birth, will be shown on the church lawn, North Henderson rd. and Lee blvd.

Two complete casts of eight persons will appear each night. In addition, real animals will be tied in the stable yard.

High above the church, a large star will be erected to shine over the scene.

The Nativity tableau will open after the lighting of the community Christmas tree at the Arlington Forest shopping center, about two blocks away from the church. Church members will sing carols as they walk from the tree-lighting to the church.

More than 200 persons will work on different phases of the production—some as members of the cast, others preparing costumes and arranging for properties or preparing hot food for the cast members.

Each Saturday until the pageant begins, men from the church will work on building the wooden stable. Last week they began their work by gathering the rough wood of which the building will be constructed.

After the presentation last year, the Rev. Harry G. Balthis, pastor of the church, received many letters of thanks from persons who saw "The Living Nativity" during the Christmas season.

One minister in the community wrote that "one could not help but note the contrast between the rush and commercialism of Christmas and the beauty and simplicity of that Nativity picture that you people presented so well," while another wrote that the pageant "served to awaken an awareness of the true significance of Christmas among the people of this community and the passersby."

Chairman of the pageant this year is Warner M. Miller, who saw a similar living Nativity in Norfolk, Va., and led the church in its first production last year.

St. Andrew

Brotherhood Rally Set Wednesday

Members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew from Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia will meet for their annual St. Andrew's Day observance Wednesday at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette sq.

Mr. Glenn

The program will begin with a corporate Communion at St. John's Church at 6 p. m. Following the service, the men and their guests will meet for dinner in the St. John's Parish hall at 821 16th st. nw.

Speaker at the meeting will be the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's and chaplain of the St. John's parish brotherhood. New members will be introduced at the meeting.

The St. Andrew's day meeting will highlight the 1949 campaign of renewal and advance of the service brotherhood, which was founded about 60 years ago in Chicago.

Hours of the services were arranged so that all of them were in progress at the same time. Thus, the Washington service at 10:15 a. m. began at the same time as the service in London, which was at 3:15 p. m., Greenwich time.

Colonial-Style Navy Chapel . . .

FOR MILITARY PERSONNEL—Interior view of the Navy Chapel, 3801 Nebraska ave. nw., which serves military personnel on duty in Greater Washington. Lieut. Commdr. Cyril Best, former assistant chaplain at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, is chaplain. Sunday services are scheduled as follows: Protestant—7:30 a. m., Holy Communion; 10:45 a. m., divine worship; Holy Communion at 10:45 a. m. on the first Sunday of each month. Roman Catholic—Mass at 8:30 a. m., confessions before mass

Takoma Park Church to Open

Special services Sunday will mark the opening of the new Grace Methodist Church, New Hampshire and Kentland aves., Takoma Park, Md.

Ground for the $80,000 limestone church in modified Gothic design was broken last spring.

Children of the Sunday school will be the first to use the new building when they meet in their new classrooms at 9:45 a. m.

At 11 a. m. members of the congregation will meet in the sanctuary to hear a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Fred C. Reynolds, district Methodist superintendent. Twenty new members of Grace Church will be received.

Bishop Charles Wesley Flint, resident bishop of the Washington area of the Methodist Church, will speak at the consecration service at 3 p. m.

Young people from the community and neighboring churches have been invited to a youth rally in the fellowship hall at 8 p. m. Guest speaker will be the Rev. J. Artley Leatherman, pastor of Hamline Methodist Church.

The new building has a sanctuary seating 300 and departmental Sunday school classrooms. It is connected to the old church building, which will be used as a fellowship hall.

Grace church was organized in 1944, and the Rev. H. R. Hodgson has been its pastor since August, 1945.

Dr. Blackwelder Gives Series on Christmas

The Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder will begin a series of sermons on "Preparing for a Worthwhile Christmas" at 8 p. m. Sunday at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, 212 East Capitol st.

Individual topics are: "The Kind of Man to Have a Happy Christmas;" "Christmas — Inward and Outward;" "If Christmas Never Comes Again," and "The Finest Christmas Symbol."

Silver Dollar Campaign Brings $1614

One hundred 50 silver dollars, given to a women's Bible class last July this week added $1614.85 to the growing building fund of First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw.

Mrs. Mary W. Royal, 1703 Q st. nw., gave the money to members of the Dawson Bible Class of the church during the summer. Mrs. Royal is a member of the class, which is taught by Mrs. J. M. Dawson.

Originally, members of the class hoped that they would be able to multiply the money by 10 before turning the dollars back into the $600,000 church building fund drive.

$2000 Their Goal

The success of the effort has them aiming now at giving $2000 to the fund, since a few members of the class still have not reported on their investments.

The 120 members of the class met at the church this week for a "talent dinner" in honor of Mrs. Royal at which they reported on their investments.

After the dinner 12 class representatives deposited the full money bags before a lighted picture of the proposed new First Baptist Church. The Rev. Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor, was the speaker.

All Sorts of Work

Class members did all sorts of work in their spare time to make the money work for them and the church building fund. Several spent their dollars for ingredients for cookies, candies, and other foods, which they sold to their friends.

One girl did dressmaking, another typing, and another acted as a chauffeur. Many were baby sitters, using the dollar for carfare and for toys to entertain the children. One class member earned more than $100 from her original silver dollar.

Bishop Angus Dun To Speak Monday On Christian Faith

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will speak at 8 p. m. Monday at St. John's Episcopal Church, Wisconson ave., and Bradley la., Bethesda, Md., on "The Christian Faith."

The lecture is the first in a series of three to be held. On Monday, December 5, the Rev. Theodore O. Wedel, warden of the College of Preachers and a canon of the Washington Cathedral, will speak on "The Christian Church."

Speaker at the final lecture on December 12 will be the Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the cathedral and custodian of the Book of Common Prayer. He will speak on "Christian Worship."

Sunday CHURCH EVENTS

John Wesley A. M. E. Zion Church, 14th and Corcoran sts. nw., will observe "Keystone Sunday" at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Dr. Frederick E. Ressig, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, will preach at the service which is part of the church's month-long centennial celebration.

Giuseppe Moschetti will present an organ recital at 8 p. m. at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas cir. nw. A native of Tuscany, Italy, Moschetti has played concerts in Europe, Canada and the United States.

The story of Daniel will be portrayed in a movie at 8 p. m. at Brookland Baptist Church, 16th and Monroe sts. ne. It is one of a series of "Bible Biographies" being presented by the pastor of the church, the Rev. Ward B. Hurlburt.

The Utah Centel Centennial Chorus, composed of young men who are serving as missionaries of the Mormon Church, will sing at 8 p. m. at Memorial Evangelical United Brethren Church, 1700 North Capitol st.

The Right Rev. William M. M. Thomas, retired Bishop of the Missionary District of Brazil, will preach and administer the rite of confirmation at 11 a. m. at Grace Episcopal Church, 9th and D sts. sw. After the service there will be a coffee hour at which members of the congregation will have an opportunity to meet the bishop.

"What is the Height and Breadth of Religion?" is the question upon which the Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks will preach at 11 a. m. at Universalist National Memorial Church, 1810 16th st. nw.

Miss Joan Williams, executive secretary of the Interchurch Fellowship, will tell of her experiences in a work camp in Germany at 8 p. m. at Calvary Methodist Church, 1459 Columbia rd. nw.

Immaculate Heart Novena Wednesda

The annual novena to the Immaculate Heart will be conducted at St. Stephen's Catholic Church, 23th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., from Wednesday, November 30, through Thursday, December 8.

The Rev. Blaise Scannell of the Franciscan Order will give sermons on the sanctity of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

Novena services will be at 5:20 and 7:45 p. m., with masses at 6:30 and 7:30 a. m.

Presbyterians Celebrating Anniversary

Members of Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church, 16th and Newton sts. nw., are in the midst of the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the dedication of their present building.

DR. BRASKAMP

Anniversary events began on Wednesday, when the congregation of the church attended a Thanksgiving eve service and later enjoyed an anniversary party given by the church board of deacons.

On Sunday at 11 a. m. the Rev. Dr. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of the church since 1920, will preach at a service of rededication, and at 7 p. m. the Young Peoples' Fellowship and the Westminster Fellowship will give a program in the parlor of the chapel.

Banquet to Be Climax

Climax of the anniversary celebration will be an anniversarry banquet on Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. in the church assembly room.

Huston Thompson, former assistant United States Attorney General and one of two surviving members of a group of laymen and ministers who participated in the dedication service 25 years ago, will be present for the banquet and will be one of the speakers.

The present church was formed in 1920 as a result of the merger of Gunton-Temple Memorial and Gurley Memorial Presbyterian Churches.

Organized as Unity Church

Organized in 1882 as Unity Church, the name of the church was changed to Gunton-Temple in 1893 when a building at 14th and R sts. nw. was given to the Church by Mrs. Mary Gunton Temple in memory of her father, Dr. William Gunton, and her husband, Edward Temple.

Gurley Memorial Church was organized in 1889 and named in memory of the Rev. Dr. Phineas D. Gurley, onetime chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. It was first located at 7th st. and Florida ave. and later at 14th and Meridian sts. nw.

Dr. Braskamp has spent his entire ministry serving churches in Washington. Before becoming pastor of the united church he was pastor of Gurley Church. He was formerly assistant pastor of what is now National Presbyterian Church.

Mission-Like Service At St. Thomas Church

At 8 p. m. Sunday, St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, 18th between P and Q sts. nw., will have the first of a series of services patterned after the recently completed Diocesan Mission at the Washington Cathedral.

The service will include informal hymn singing, a sermon by the Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick, rector, and a question period.

McGrath Lists Rules To Fight Communism

A primer for combatting communism was set forth yesterday by J. Howard McGrath, Attorney General of the United States.

A figurative Ten Commandments—literally seven—the document may well be one of the most specific manifestos in this field laid down by a major Government official.

It is also McGrath's first extended statement on the subject since taking Cabinet office.

General Application Implied

It was delivered as a speech, before the National Interfraternity Conference at the Mayflower Hotel, under the formal title: "What the American College Fraternity System Can Do to Combat the Menace of Subsersive Influences and Activities on College Campuses."

But its tenor suggested the desirability, from the Attorney General's point of view of all Americans applying the specified methods and guideposts.

McGrath described "the spirit of free inquiry" as "the most potent weapon ever devised."

"Modes of Action"

Then he laid down the seven preparations and "modes of action . . . for this fight against subversive doctrines." Excerpts:

"1. Be well informed about the world in which you live. Communism is a philosophy of life, a philosophy which embraces philosophy, economics, politics, the arts and sciences, religion. The Communist will argue Marxist principles on any one or all of these premises.

"2. Be cognizant of the history of American democracy.

"3. Exemplify, in your own conduct and thought, the principles of democratic achievement.

"4. Know your enemy. Know the historical facts of communism as developed by Marx and Engels, as continued by Lenin and Stalin, as being applied throughout the world today.

"Know the inner meaning of communism. The Communist, though garbed in the clothes of justice, freedom, equality and peace is, in reality, the twentieth century prototype of the age-old tyranny of the few over the many.

Calls for Alertness

"The Communists will endeavor to infiltrate regular and established campus organizations. Be especially alert in literature, debating, political, sociological and current affairs groups.

"Communist front groups. These generally have a high sounding title, resplendent with reverence for the traditions of America, and allegedly dedicated to the correction of some supposed defect in democratic society. Examine the group carefully. Who are its leaders? When was it founded? What are its principles? Who are its speakers? What is its opinion regarding current issues of the day—towards Soviet Russia?

"Marxist Study Groups: The Communists sponsor voluntary discussion groups, dedicated, they say, to 'a study of the classics of Marxism.' It is a lure, a bait—to obtain attendance.

On Social Affairs

"Communist social affairs: The Communists are 'believers' in social life. They sponsor, usually through their front organizations, many dances, parties, get-togethers.

"Loyalty oaths for fraternities, college organizations and societies are not the way to meet the challenge. The loyalty of the college student should be expressed, not in a formal oath, but in day-to-day life on the campus.

"5. Learn to Think Straight. Observe certain fundamental methods of operation:

"Don't make false charges—don't label a man or organization as Communist until you know all the facts A man's loyalty to his country is one of his most hallowed possessions. To accuse a man falsely of harboring, condoning and abetting disloyal activities is reprehensible and thoroughly inexcusable.

"Obtain all the facts, not just the ones which might be more vivid or the closest at hand. The fraternity man must learn to trace the scene of disloyalty down the correct path, and not be led by over-eagerness, foggy intellectualism, pressure tacaics or need to find a scapegoat.

Important Distinction

Don't confuse academic inquiry with propaganda advocacy. . . . Dont confuse the student who reads Communist literature for the purpose of obtaining knowledge with the student who is using the literature for the purpose of converting or influencing his associates.

"Distinguish between Communists and non-Communists within organizations. The fraternity man must learn to identify Communists, pinpoint their activities, and not characterize an entire organization as Communist controlled when only a few members, not in a position of authority, are present.

"The fraternity man must not use vigilante action. He must obtain the facts, clearly and completely, and report them to the appropriate authorities. If he attempts to take upon himself the task of destroying communism by direct action he will spread the very evil he abhors. . . . Moreover, if the Communists are singled out for vigilante action they become martyrs not only in their own eyes but in the opinion of many non-Communist Americans.

"6" Specific Suggestions for Concrete Action by Fraternity Men to Fight Communism:

"(a). Be alert to the preaching of Communist (or Fascist) doctrines in the college classroom and campus organizations. Distinguish between the teaching of the facts of communism and the preaching, or conscious propagandization of Marxist doctrine. The university classroom must not become the rostrum of Communist propaganda.

"(b). Identify individuals who, in private conversation or in university activities, accept without deviation the Communist Party line.

"(c). Be alert to the activities of professors and students who have been identified as Communists. Are they trying to infiltrate or influence organizations, school elections or university policy?

"(d). Answer every letter written to the campus newspaper by Communist elements. Your answer must be based on the true facts—debate them with facts, not passion.

"(e). Encourage anti-Communist speakers to address campus assemblies. These men also might write articles for the campus newspaper.

"(f). Explain, by word of mouth or letters to the newspaper that Communist study groups and social affairs are, in fact, Communist controlled, despite their masking by high sounding titles.

"(g). Cooperation with the campus bookstore, where special displays depicting the publication of books, written by authoritative authors exposing Communist chicanery and deceit, might be established.

"(h). Report the fact of Communist activities to the proper school officials, the dean, the president.

"7. Making democracy work is the best answer to the Communist challenge.

"The fight against communism is not a negative fight. The Nation, community and university, as can be expected, are not perfect instruments. They have defects—defects which give the Communists talking points. The fraternity man must work to remedy these defects. The Marxists thereby automatically will be deprived of their talking points."

Student Group Told U. S. Sets Good Example by U. N. Work

The United States is practicing what it preaches on international cooperation by participating fully in all the work of the United Nations, John Martin Cates, jr., State Department foreign affairs specialist, said last night.

Cates said U. N. achievements in which Americans participated show a good record of compliance with the U. N. Charter, even though we are faced with many instances of the Soviet Union's "nonparticipation" and "refusal to cooperate."

Cates, who is in the division of United Nations Economic and Social Affairs, addressed a banquet of 250 students from more than 100 colleges and universities, at Georgetown University.

The students are here as delegates to a two-day conference of the American Association of International Relations Clubs. Dr. Tibor Kerekes, Georgetown professor, is in charge of the conference.

Cates cited the work of a dozen agencies of the United Nations with which the United States has worked on problems of distribution, communications, health, food, trade, aviation, banking and social conditions. Americans attended more than 6000 U. N.-sponsored meetings last year, he said.

Earlier, Dr. Albert Lleras, secretary general of the Organization of American States, had declared that collective action could be taken under existing treaties if a Communist revolution in an American state should endanger the peace of others.

Dr. Lleras' statement was in answer to a question from the floor, following his luncheon talk to the group. A student delegate asked if action could be taken by the American states in case of an "internal Marxist revolution."

Dr. Lleras said the present treaties ban interference in the internal affairs of the individual states.

"But it is possible that a Communist revolution could bring international danger to peace," he said, "and in that case, the other states could take action through the Organiaztion of American States."

'Meet the Master' To Be Presented At Tea Monday

"Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," a collection of 12 sermons by the late Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, will be introduced to the public at a tea from 3 to 7 p. m. Monday at the Washington Federation of Churches, 1751 N st. nw.

Dr. Marshall, chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, died in January. His wife, who made the collection, will be present to autograph copies of the book.

Monday is the day set by the Fleming H. Ravell Co. of New York for publication. According to officials, the first printing and most of the second have been exhausted by dealers already.

FBI Aide to Speak At National City

Louis B. Nichols, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will speak at a church night dinner at the National City Christian Church social hall, 1306 Vermont ave. nw., on Thursday at 6:15 p. m. He will talk on "The Church—An Answer to Crime."

Many Series Of Sermons In Advent

Advent, the season in the church year which precedes the celebration of Christmas, will begin Sunday.

Many clergymen have planned sermon series for the four Sundays in Advent.

At St. Patrick's Catholic Church, 10th and G sts. nw., the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith of the School of Philosophy at Catholic University, will preach at Sunday masses at 9:45 a. m. and 12:45 p. m. during Advent.

He has announced the following sermon topics: November 27, "Heaven Toils for Christmas"; December 4, "The Nations at Christmas Time"; December 11, "Religions and the Divine Infant"; December 18, "The People and the Divine Babe"; and on Christmas Day "A Happy Christmas."

At 8 p. m. Sunday the first of three west end Advent services will be held at Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church, 20th and G sts. nw. Young adults from Union Methodist, Western Presbyterian and Concordia Churches will conduct the services.

The Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder will begin a series of Advent services at 11 a. m. at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut ave. and Everett sts. nw., at 11 a. m. Sunday.

On Sunday he will speak on "A great Season—Advent," on December 4 "A Great Symbol—the Cross," December 11 "A Great Scripture—the Bible," December 25, "A Great Saviour—the Christ."

Catholic Action Medal for 1949 Goes to Mohler

Bruce M. Mohler, director of the bureau of immigration of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, has been named recipient of the Catholic Action Medal for 1949, an annual award made by St. Bonaventure College of New York.

In announcing the award, the Very Rev. Juvenal Lalor, OFM, president of St. Bonaventure College, described Mohler, who lives here at the Cairo Hotel, 1615 Q st. nw., as an "exemplary Catholic layman whose whole life is devoted to works of charity and to the interests and welfare of the Catholic Church."

Mohler, after World War I, was appointed to the American mission to Poland under the Hoover relief plan. He became associated with the NCWC in 1920 and organized its bureau of immigration.

British Health Discussed

National health services of Great Britain will be discussed by Dr. Leslie Banks, former British Health Minister, at 10 a. m. Sunday at a meeting of the Forum of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw.

"Jesus the Teacher" is the title of an Advent series the Rev. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf will begin at 11 a. m. Sunday at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

The Very Rev. John Wallace Suter, dean of the Washington Cathedral, will preach on "The King" in the first of a series of Advent sermons at 11 a. m. at the cathedral.

Liquidity Rate Of D. C. Banks Stands at 78%

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington's 19 banks showed a liquidity rate of 78 per cent as of November 1, according to figures supplied by the office of the Comptroller of Currency.

This means that for every dollar on deposit, the local institutions virtually had 78 cents on hand. A high liquidity rate indicates that there are ample funds on hand here to meet credit needs in the future.

As of the start of this month, the banks held $533,542,000 in Government bonds and other securities. In actual cash and balances with other banks, the local institutions had another $250,740,000. This made an aggregate of $784,282,000 in readily available funds, as compared with deposits of $1,005,389,000 as of November 1.

Total loans stood at $279,578,000 on November 1, a gain of about 10 million in the first 10 months this year.

Total capital accounts amounted to $71,108,000 on the latest date, as compared with $68,[illegible] the start of this year. Surplus of $33,650,000, compared with $32,225,000; undivided profits of $13,462,000 with $12,369,000 and reserves of $3,006,000 with $2,661,000.

As reported previously, deposits of the 19 banks aggregated $1,005,398 against $990,000,000 [illegible] 30, this year, and $1,019,760,000 on December 31, 1948.

STORE SALES: Washington department store sales in the first 10 months this year showed a higher trend than the average for the Fifth Federal Reserve District. Dollar volume here was up 1 per cent for the 10-month period, despite a 7 per cent decline in October. The Reserve District showed a decline of 4 per cent for the 10 months and a drop of 12 per cent for October.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: H. L. McGrath, retired Army colonel, has joined the Washington insurance agency of J. D. Marsh and Associates . . . Gary M. Underhill, formerly of Washington, has been elected a vice president of the Girard Trust Co. of Philadelphia . . . Crawford W. Cline has been promoted to manager of All American Airways' traffic department . . . Rufus C. Phillips, jr., president of Airways Engineering Corp., has been named chairman of the Washington Board of Trade's airport committee . . . Joseph E. Pogue, petroleum economist and New York banker, has been elected a director of the Gulf Oil Corp.

Army 2-Touchdown Favorite to Beat Navy Today

Justice Bows Out Today As N. C. and Virginia Play

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 25—A football era, the most successful in the school's history, ends for North Carolina here tomorrow.

Choo-Choo Charlie Justice makes his farewell appearance for the Tar Heels.

Not even the fanciful imagination of a Hollywood script writer could have produced a better setting for the 25-year-old All-American halfback's final college game.

It's against Virginia, the team he's sparkled against for three years. As a freshman, the talented tailback zoomed for three touchdowns on runs of 54, 45 and 28 yards. As a sophomore, he contributed 279 yards running and throwing in the 40-7 Tar Teel triumph.

Last year he nailed down the Sugar Bowl bid for Carolina by going 80 yards, then 47 yards and tossing two touchdown passes in the 34-12 Carolina success.

Lured by the magnetic name of Justice and the last chance to see him perform in Kenan Stadium, a capacity crowd of 44,500 will sit in on the season's finale for both clubs.

It's the fifty-third clash between the two great State universities and Carolina is a two-touchdown favorite to triumph. If the Tar Heels do, it'll be their twentieth in the last 23 games. Virginia's last success came in 1944.

A Virginia loss would kill the Cavaliers' chances of playing in a major bowl game January 2. A victory, however, would send the once-beaten Cavaliers to either Miami's Orange Bowl, against Santa Clara, or Jacksonville's Gator Bowl.

Tulane put the first blemish on the Charlottesville club's record last week, ending its victory streak at seven straight.

This figures to be Justice's show, but he won't have the stage to himself. Art Weiner, Carolina's All-America pass-catching end, will come in for attention as will Virgina's great fullback, Johnny Papit, the nation's No. 1 rusher.

And the crowd will probably see plenty of Fullback Billy Hayes, the Arlington, Va., lad who helps Justice with the Carolina running and passing.

Offensively, the Cavaliers are as well-heeled as the Tar Heels. Papit and Halfback Ralph Shoaf and Steve Osisek will take care of the running and Quarterbacks Whitey Michaels and Jimmy LeSane, the latter a sophomore, doing the pitching.

Virginia will be meeting up with three of the finest defensive players in this section in End Kenny Powell, Center Irv Holdash and Tackle Dave Wiley.

And there are several sophomore Carolina linemen who are just beginning to find themselves ready to spell these three.

The Cavalier defense hinges on End Bob Weir, Tackle Dyke Jones and Guards Johnny Thomas and Joe Palumbo. End Gene Schroeder is a fine pass defender, but after Weir, Jones, Thomas and Palumbo, the Cavalier defense is thin, too thin to contain Justice & Co. for 60 minutes.

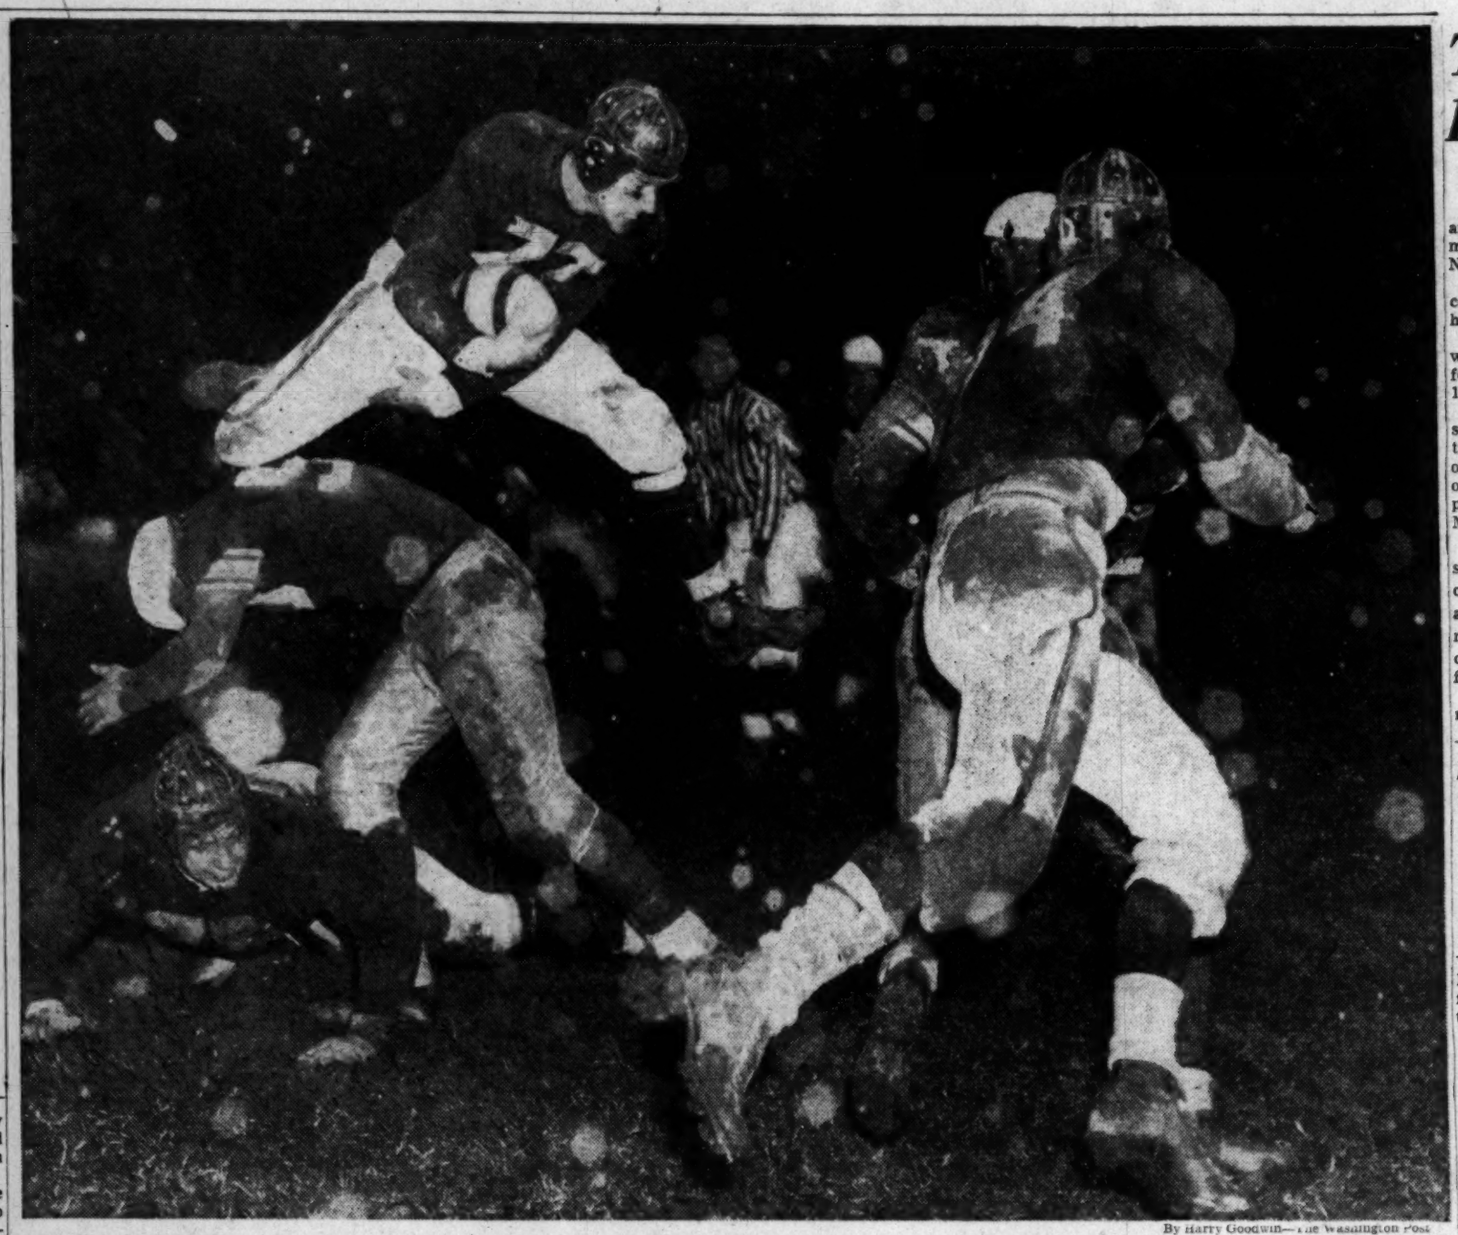
Tar Heels Reported Going to Cotton Bowl

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 25 (U.P.)—A source close to the University of North Carolina football team said tonight North Carolina has received an invitation to play in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Tex., January 2, and that the team voted today to acept.

The bid was reportedly made regardless of the outcome of North Carolina's final game with Virginia here tomorrow. Coach Carl Snavely would make no comment.



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

INTERHIGH HURDLER—Cocaptain Rax Fox, of McKinley Tech, leaps into the Griffith Stadium air for an 11-yard gain in the third quarter of the championship contest against Wilson last night. Fox accounted for all three of his team's touchdowns, passing for two scores and bucking over for the third. Despite his great play, the Trainers lost to Wilson, 21-20, in a real thriller played in a swirling snowstorm

If Code Is Ignored . . .

NCAA Boss Says Virginia May Be Expelled, Ostracized

College Station, Tex., Nov. 25 (AP).—The National Collegiate Athletic Association's "sanity code" will work if given the proper chance, Dr. Karl Leib, president of the NCAA, said today. But he expressed knowledge of a division of opinion over some of the rules among Southern colleges.

Here yesterday to attend the Texas-Texas A. and M. football game on the way to Fort Worth where he will address the Texas Interscholastic League, Dr. Leib said the University of Virginia, if it followed its anouncement intentions of not meeting the code regarding aid to athletes, might expect to be expelled from the NCAA.

He also answered the question of whether Virginia could compete then against members of the NCAA in athletics with a quick "no."

"I have not been officially notified by Virginia that it will not follow the NCAA code," Dr. Leib said. "This question will be in the hands of the compliance committee. It will come before the NCAA at its annual convention in New York in January."

Captain Norton Pritchett, Virginia's director of athletics, said at Charlottesville, Va., that he thought Dr. Leib was "offside" in making such a statement. "The NCAA rules stipulate that no statement of publicity are to be made until action is taken against a school," Pritchett declared.

American U. Beats Quantico By 67 to 50

American University's Eagles chalked up their second straight basketball win with a 67-50 victory over the Quantico Marines last night at American U. Ronnie Garshag and Bob Lamon tied for high scoring honors for the winners with 16 points apiece. Cy Waldrop swished through 11 points for the losers.

American's Ron Garshag put through a hook shot to break a 5-5 tie in the first quarter and the Eagles never lost the lead.

Caps Take On Ft. Wayne Here Tonight

The Caps, hardly their early-season winning selves, will be struggling to stay above the .500 mark against Fort Wayne tonight at Uline Arena.

In the BAA past, the Caps usually were winging at this stage—last year they won their first 15 games.

Things have been different in the newly-formed NBA circuit. For example, tonight the Caps (6-5) are expected to lose their third straight to the powerful visitors.

Fort Wayne, coached by veteran Murray Mendenhall, is the surprise of the strong Central Division. The Pistons have taken 8 of their 10 games to vault into the lead Towering Fort Wayne is being paced by West Virginia's Fred Schaus. The 6-foot-4 forward, that's the average height of the team, has scored 131 points for a 14.6 average.

Battling Over Bowl Bids Marks Gridiron Card Today

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—The annual Army-Navy fracas tops the college football program today, while the outcome of several other major games will be watched with interest as they produce possible fodder for New Year's bowl events.

Army and Navy play at Philadelphia's huge Municipal Stadium.

Then there is the Southern California-Notre Dame scrap at South Bend, Ind., one of the sternest grid rivalries in the Nation, which began in 1926. Notre Dame, the Nation's No. 1 team, will be remembering last year's 14-14 tie with the Trojans.

Rice and Baylor, playing at Houston, will have the Southwestern Conference title and the job of playing host in the Cotton Bowl at stake in their game. The team winning is expected to make known its preference for an opponent in the Cotton Bowl tomorrow night.

Oklahoma, ranked the No. 3 team this week, should make Oklahoma A. & M. its tenth victim of the season in their clash at Norman. Oklahoma is a sure-fire bowl team, probably the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans.

The Tulane-L. S. U. affair at New Orleans is expected to help clear up the Sugar Bowl situation. Tulane, Southeastern Conference champion, probably will get a bid if it can hurdle L. S. U., a tough team in recent weeks. With Santa Clara already picked for Miami's Orange Bowl, the other half of the lineup might possibly emerge from tonight's game between Kentucky and Miami.

Other games on the program include Alabama-Florida, Auburn-Clemson, Boston College-Holy Cross, Brigham Young-Pepperdine, Colorado A. & M.-Colorado, Fordham-New York University, Georgia-Georgia Tech, Kansas-Arizona, Mississippi-Mississippi State, North Carolina State-William & Mary, Southern Methodist-Texas Christian, Tennessee-Vanderbilt, Tulsa-Arkansas, and Wake Forest-South Carolina.

Aguilar Loses To Sonny Boy At Uline Arena

Washington's Sonny Boy West climbed another fistic notch last night at Uline Arena when he scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Ernesto Aguilar, Mexican featherweight champion.

Lightweight West had Aguilar on the ropes several times but was unable to knock the Mexican to the canvas.

In a whirlwind finish, Aguilar was cut about the mouth but took all Sonny Boy had to offer. West weighed in at 134 and Aguilar scaled in at 132½.

A crowd of 528 braved the bad weather and paid a gross gate of $788. The net was $548.

Washington's Walter Roane stopped Angel Chavez, Puerto Rican lightweight, after 1:45 of the fifth, of a six-round semifinal.

Billy Coffield outpointed Billy Hickerson; Joe Camarata won over Maurice Nelson, and George Carrigan got the nod over George Sherrod in four-round preliminaries.

Truman and 102,000 Fans See Philly Clash

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—Strife between the armed services breaks out anew tomorrow, with the blessings of Comander-inchief Harry S. Truman and 102,000 of the citizenry who hold tickets for the 50th Army-Navy game in Municipal Stadium.

The two eager football teams were bedded down tonight in quiet country retreats, awaiting the 1:30 p. m. kickoff in the presence of high brass, high braid and highly-envied civilian ticket holders.

The conditions will be ideal only for the football players, with the weather forecasts promising a cold, cloudy and perhaps windy setting for Navy's attempt to upset the unbeaten Army team that is favored by 14 points.

President Truman, who will head a White House party of 23 on the special train that leaves Washington tomorrow morning, will continue to shatter precedent by watching the entire game from the Army side of the field. Last year he sat it out on the Navy side in the surprising 21-21 tie achieved by the Midshipmen.

Army Coach Earl Blaik, understandably wary of Navy teams that come up to the Army with disarming records and throw 60-minute frights into the Cadets, confesses to a "profound respect" for Navy.

In the two weeks since Army's narrow escape from defeat by Penn, Blaik has installed new offensive tactics for his striking platoon designed to give Quarterback Arnold Galiffa more protection on passes and shake Army ball carriers loose for more yardage.

Navy Coach George Sauer had his squad in sprawling Municipal Stadium today for a closed workout before shooing it to a suburban country club for over-night rest.

Against the Army platoons of Blaik, Sauer will toss a Navy team that has won three games, lost four and tied one. Sauer substitutes freely, but not in platoon style.

Nineteen games Army has won since its last defeat, with last season's 21-21 tie by the Middies the only blot on their record.

Sauer admits that Navy will rely in great measure tomorow on the passing arm of Sophomore Quarterback Bob Zastrow, but for the first time this season the Navy attack will be buttressed by the presence of all of Sauer's finest ballcarriers.

Frank Hauff and Bill Powers, out intermittently with injuries, are restored to the Navy backfield, and will team will Dave Bannerman, Zastrow and Duff Arnold in what Navy hopes will be its finest offensive display of the year.

The 3,400 Midshipmen of the regiment will march into the stadium at noon, to be followed by the 2,600 Army Cadets. Television and radio descriptions of the ceremonies and the game will blanket the Nation.

Against the two-touchdown favoritism of Army, is the always-present factor of possible upsets in Army-Navy engagements. On too many occasions have the record books of past season performances been meaningless when the opening whistle is heard.

The chief concern of Navy Coach Sauer is his squad's ability to contain the whizzing speed of Army backs, led by Jim Cain and Jack Martin whose winged-foot flights have featured the Army offensive all season. Especially is Cain a threat with his ability either to take a hand-off or a pass from the talented Galliffa.

Navy is alerted also to the heavy-duty work of Gil Stephenson and Frank Fischel, the inside runners in Blaik's T-formation.

Army and Navy have met two common foes this season—Penn and Columbia—and in each case the Cadets out-shined Navy, but there is solace for the Midshipmen in the fact that last year Army was favored by three touchdowns and could get only a 21-21 tie.

Facts and Figures On Army-Navy Game

Miami Bows To Kentucky Rally, 21-6

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25 (AP).—The powerful University of Kentucky Wildcats roared back tonight and smashed a gallant University of Miami football team 21 to 6 before 42,970 spectators in the Orange Bowl.

The losers close out their season next Friday night here against strong Maryland.

Miami's hopes soared skyward in the first three minutes of play. Ted Bouyoucas kicked off for the home team and Tom Flynn recovered the fumbled ball on the Kentucky 20. Jack Brasington picked up eight yards and Mike Vacchio made it first down on the nine.

On fourth down, Jack Hackett passed to Ralph Fieler in the end zone for a touchdown. Gordon Watson's try for point was wide and Miami led, 6-0.

Kentucky drove from its own 17 to the Miami 18, where the Hurricanes held and took over. Andy Novak's punt went out on the Miami 41. Bob Brooks picked up three. Ralph Genito gained five and then added two more.

Genito again made two and a first down to the Miami 30. Genito skimmed left end for 16 and Jim Howe hit right guard for seven as the quarter ended.

Genito rammed right guard for three more and a first down on Miami's three. Genito made slightly more than a yard and then dived over for the score. Brooks added the point from placement and Kentucky went ahead, 7 to 6.

Kentucky gave an exhibition of its vaunted power in the third period. Don Phelps took Bouyoucas' kick on the seven and returned to the 30. The Wildcats ripped through for consistent gains and despite two 15-yard penalties for personal fouls, marched to the four yard line.

Phelps slammed over right end for the touchdown and Brooks added the extra point to give Kentucky a 14-6 lead.

In the fourth Miami recovered two fumbles deep in Wildcat territory to keep the home team's hopes alive. John Netoskie buried them when he intercepted Jack Hackett's pass on the Kentucky 20 and raced down the sidelines to score. Brooks nailed the lid on the coffin with a perfect placement and the score read: Kentucky 21, Miami 6.

Kentucky	0	7	7	7	—21
Miami	6	0	0	0	— 6

Touchdowns: Kentucky—Genito, Phelps, Netoskie. Extra points—Brooks (3). Touchdown: Miami—Fieler (pass from Hackett).

Orange Bowl Picks Other Team Today

Miami, Fla., Nov. 25 (AP).—The Orange Bowl committee announced tonight it will hold a meeting tomorrow to vote on an opponent to play Santa Clara in the bowl here January 2.

Kentucky announced it would accept a bid to play "in any bowl" if tendered the invitation.

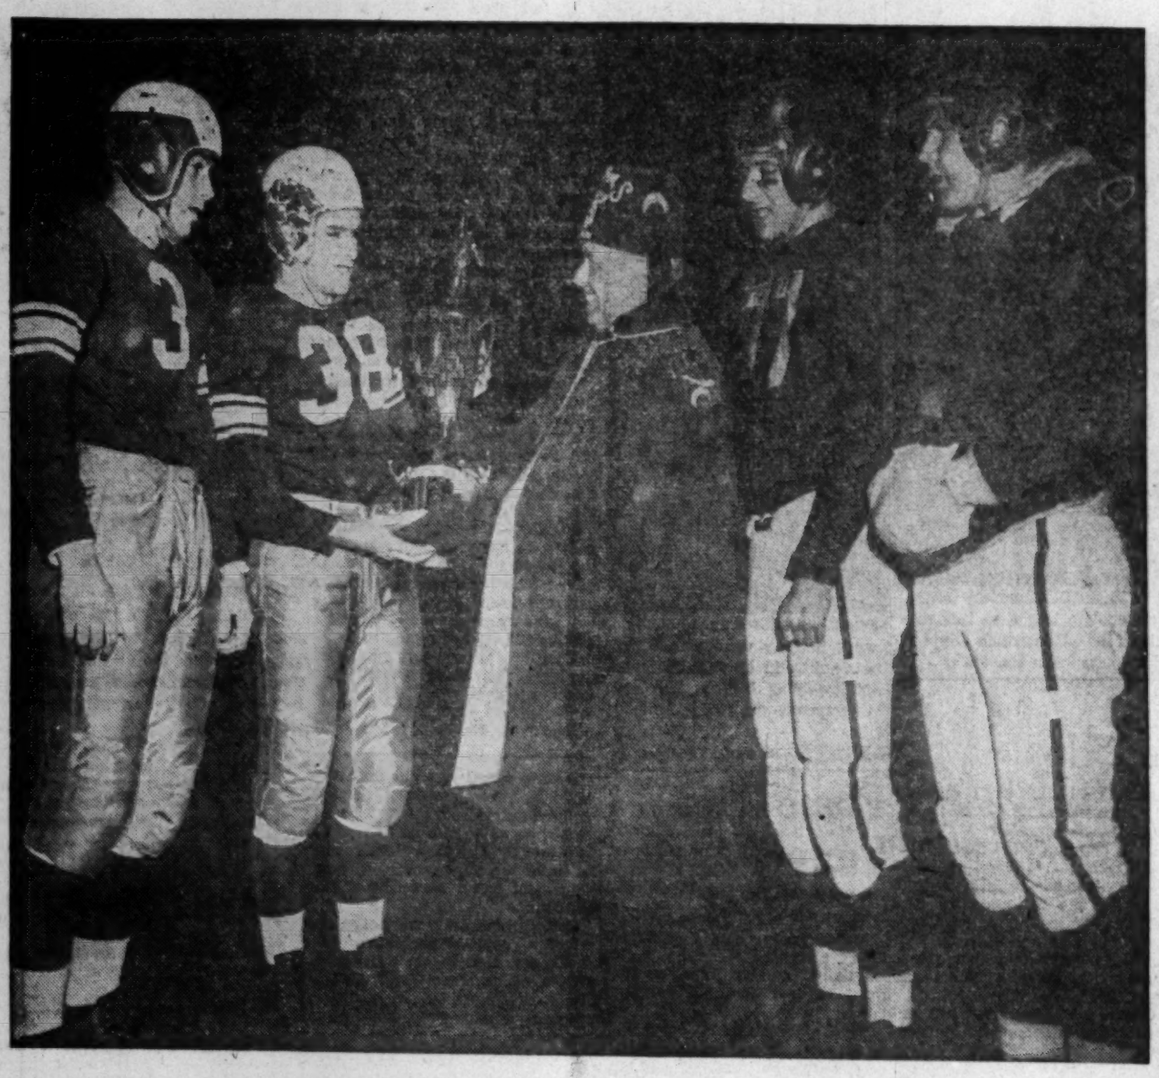
Wilson Has Victor's Cup—Tech Has the Blues



TO THE VICTORS—Cocaptains Leo Speros (No. 3) and Don Meaney of Wilson High receive the Almas Temple Shrine Cup as a symbol of the Tigers' victory over McKinley Tech last night. Presenting the champion trophy is Renah Camalier, imperial potentate of Almas Shrine Temple, while Cocaptains Ray Fox (77) and Bob Green of Tech look on

WRECKED TECH—Disconsolate over their team's one-point defeat, these Tech players remained on the bench for a full minute after the Trainers' 21-20 loss to Wilson. It was one of the most spectacular games in Interhigh history

Sebastian Kicks Wilson to 1st Title

Tech's three-touchdown rally in the last half.

A banner-waving crowd of 7543, a most remarkable turnout considering the disagreeable weather, watched Fox rouse Tech from a 14-0 halftime deficit, and almost lift his team to victory.

The turning point came with 4:35 left in the game. Fox had just passed 40 yards to Ritchie Gaskell for Tech's second touchdown, and Tech trailed, 14-13.

Ed Hudgins, Trainers' pudgy place-kicking specialist, was called in from the sidelines to try to convert the tying point. He had made 15 out of 18 until then.

Ed dug his foot into the turf a little too soon, and the ball wobbled off to the right. It was a heartbreaking moment for Tech, and Hudgins, as Wilson still led, 14-13.

Three minutes later Speros cracked over Tech's left guard, got a smart block from Tommy Sandoz, and raced 36 yards for a touchdown. Sebastian followed with his third extra point and Wilson had a 21-13 lead.

Undaunted, Fox spirited Tech on a comeback drive of 45 yards with four passes, the last to Johnny Portch for a touchdown, with 50 seconds left. Hudgins kick, this time, was good, but not enough to gain a tie for the Trainers.

The Fox-Speros duel was spectacular. Fox passed for two touchdowns and scored one. Speros scored two touchdowns and passed for one.

Speros, 195-pound crashing fullback, was first to break into the scoring column. He and Garry Quinn staked Wilson to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter on a 63-yard touchdown drive.

Speros gobbled up 43 of those yards in one swift sweep over left tackle to the Tech 20, as a Quinn block paved the way, and Harry Moul made the desparate tackle from behind for the Trainers.

Quinn and Sandoz slashed to the 5 in two plays. Then Wilson, shifting from the single wing to the double wing for the first time, sent Speros slicing over Tech's left guard to score.

Sebastian's first attempt to convert was blocked by Moul, but the eager-beaver Trainer halfback was detected offside, and Sebastian tried again. He got the boot off this time, and it was good.

Wilson's stout line, led by Guard Al Solomon, End Pete Haley and Tackle Don Meaney, was holding Fox in check during the first quarter.

Midway in the second quarter, Sandoz returned a Fox punt 12 yards to midfield, and the Tigers were off to their second touchdown.

Speros took to the air on this drive. After misfiring once, he hit Carl Prigg for a 15-yard advance. Then, with fourth down and 10 to go on Tech's 35, Speros gambled on a long heave down the left sideline.

Haley raced by Defender Frank Barbitta to snag the pass on the 7, and the lanky end scored, standing up. Again Sebastian's extra point try was perfect.

Portch intercepted a Speros pass in the third quarter to set Tech's first touchdown in motion at the Wilson 39. Fox and Stan Kernan moved the ball by land to the 26. Then Fox passed to Portch on the 21, and to Roy Delphi on the five.

Ray hacked twice at Wilson's line, scoring on the second try from the two. Hudgins' kick was perfect.

With one sharp pass late in the fourth quarter, Fox put Tech in a position to tie. Tech took a Chris King punt on the Wilson 40, and Fox cranked up his good passing arm.

He let fly with a 35-yard shot to Ritchie Gaskell, who outfoxed Defender Sandoz, and fell into the end zone. Gaskell fell so hard that he was knocked out, but quickly revived.

It was then that Hudgins suffered the disappointment of missing Tech's extra point attempt.

However, even though less than five minutes remained, there was plenty of action left as Speros unraveled his 36-yard touchdown run, and Fox covered 45 yards for a touchdown with passes to Moul, Johnny Wolfe, Gaskell and finally Portch.

Before Tech could score its final touchdown, the Wilson rootfered the disappointment of missers had torn down the goal posts, and were tramping out of the stadium.

Pat Murphy Paces CYO Team to Win

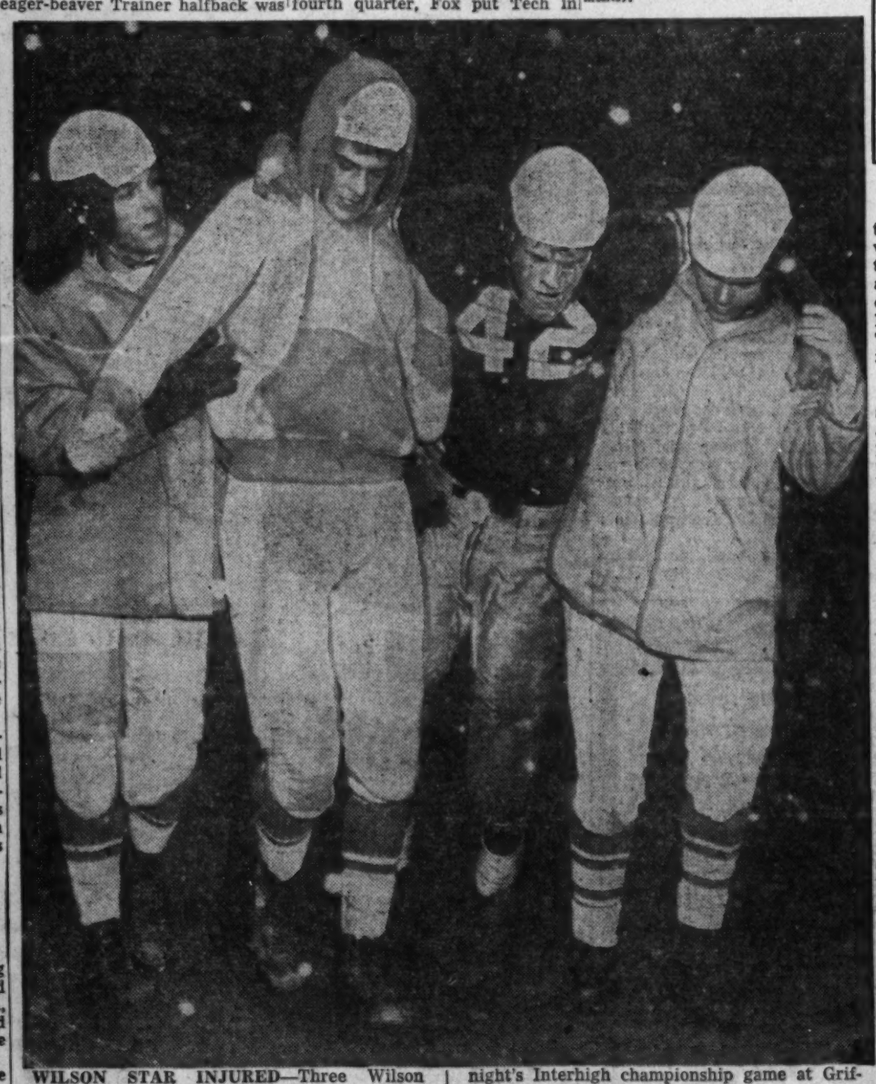
Right Forward Pat Murphy, high with 19 points, sank the decisive goal as St. Francis Xavier defeated St. Teresa's, 22-21, in a Catholic Youth Oragnization girls' intermediate division basketball game yesterday at St. Martin's gym.

In other games, Blessed Sacrament and St. Dominic's scored their third straight wins. Blessed Sacrament defeated Holy Comforter, 46-21, and St. Dominic's won from St. Jerome's, 31-12. In another league game, St. Martin's defeated Nativity, 43-39.

Felton Takes Detroit Fight

Detroit, Nov. 25 (AP).—Young Lester Felton of Detroit floored Ross Virgo of Rochester, N. Y., three times tonight as he pounded out a 10-round decision before 7818 fans at Olympia Stadium.

Jack Fallon, former Notre Dame football player and now assistant freshman coach at Wayne University, decisioned Jack Hunter of Inkster, Mich., in a four-rounder.



WILSON STAR INJURED—Three Wilson teammates help their star punter, Carl Prigg, off the field after he had injured his leg catching a pass in the first quarter of last night's Interhigh championship game at Griffith Stadium. Prigg was unable to play any more, but his sub, Chris King, did a commendable job in his place

Says Coach Carlo

Wilson Had Will, Men to Win 'Big One'

By West McLean
Post Reporter

"BABY, it's cold outside but our team was really hot tonight." Those were the sentiments expressed by the entire Wilson cheering section as Wilson won its first interhigh championship at Griffith Stadium last night by nosing out McKinley Tech, 21-20, in swirling snow flurries.

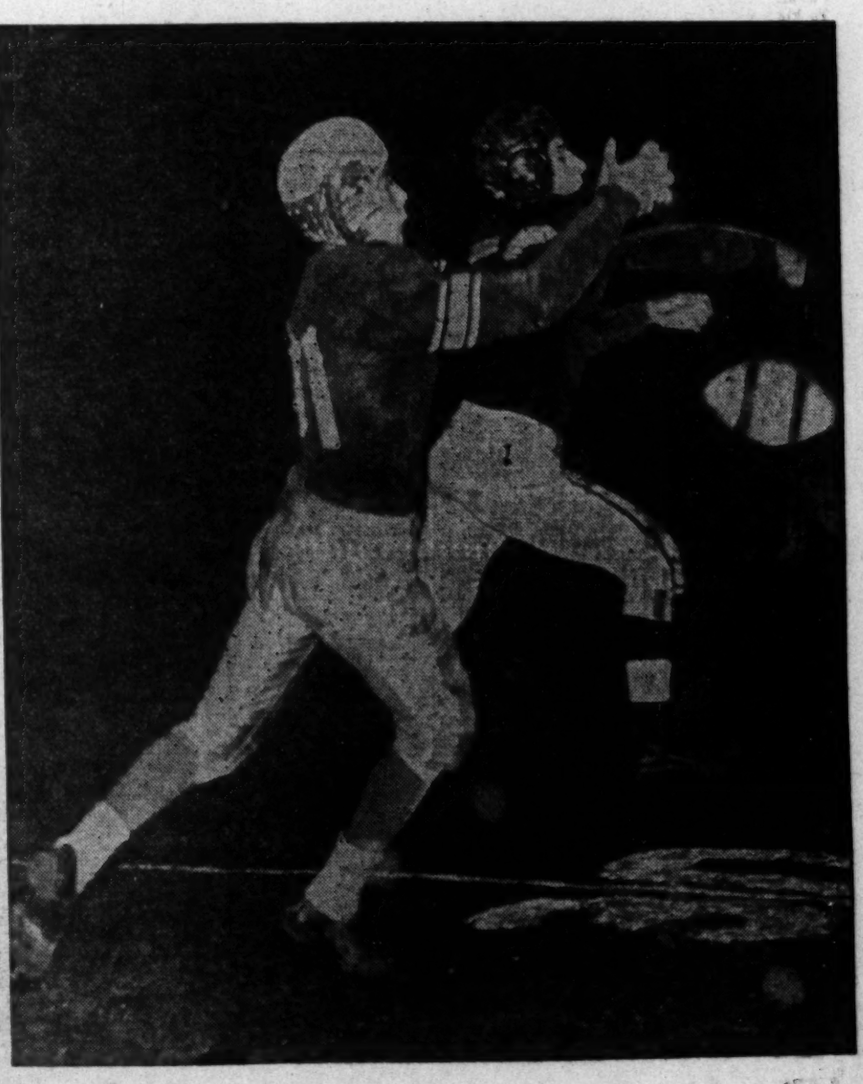
From the moment the Wilson stands started chanting, "Stop Fox" at the opening kickoff until the goal posts fells with less than a minute to play, spirit ran high through the Wilson crowd.

Joe Carlo, Wilson coach, said after the game: "It was a great game. The kids deserve all the credit. You can single out anyone you want to and say he was terrific. They all were. People have been saying all year that we'd wilt when the real pressure was on but we proved tonight that we had the men to win the big one."

The proceeds of the game will purchase athletic equipment for the 10 public high schools. Even in the championship game, the need for more equipment was painfully evident.

McKinley's Ed Hudgins, whose unsuccessful attempt at conversion in the fourth quarter proved to be Wilson's margin of victory, sat grim faced in the Tech bus after the game surrounded by his mates. "That's all right, Hudge." "It's okay." They had been reassuring the consistent pointer since the end of the game, when, completely broke up, Hudgins left the field.

At the game's end Tech's mentor Ed Solomon felt, "Oh, fine." But a young Tech lass was crying, "My stomach hurts." Hotdogs?



BEG PARDON—Halfback Frank Barbitta of McKinley Tech zooms in just in time to break up a pass intended for Tom Caudle (No. 21) of Wilson. Passer Leo Speros pitched in Caudle's direction, but that old Tech meanie, Barbitta busted it up

Pilaster Tops Bowie Field Today

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.—Pilaster, the old distance champion, carries top weight of 121 pounds tomorrow as he seeks his third straight stake victory of the Maryland season. He hopes to add the $10,000 Prince Georges Autumn Handicap to his recent scores in the Riggs Handicap and the Pimlico Cup.

Greatest deterrent to Pilaster's winning chances today is the mile and a sixteenth distance of the Prince Georges. Pilaster is one of the Nation's top distance runners, but prefers races of the mile and a half or longer category.

Opposing Pilaster will be some stout campaigners, the best of whom appears to be Hasty Farm's Seaward and Inseparable, weighted at 115 and 116 pounds, respectively.

Also of above-average ability are C. E. Tuttle's Double Brandy, 110; G. M. Jacobson's Big Dial 112, and Richard E. Carter's Oriole 110.

Seaward has already had one start over this track, turning in a fine effort when beaten only a half length by Cochise in the opening day stake. His stablemate, Inseparable, ran with success at Churchill Downs this fall and will be a worthwhile running mate.

Double Brandy, Maryland-bred 3-year-old, gained his first stake victory at Laurel this year, and since then has been close but unable to win another added-money event. WALTER HAIGHT.

DEAR FOLKS: Will the slack business at Bowie result in a slight reduction of purse money? Eight claims have been made so far with H. M. Simpson of Washington putting up $8000 for Octororo. Apprentice Nolan Griffith is through with the saddle for the year. Suffered torn muscles in chest and a badly sprained ankle in the Thursday spill. Jockey Emil Carrillo was injured slightly in a spill during training hours this a. m. Jackey Red Howell left for Florida, the lucky guy. Agent Charlie Wells will handle the riding engagements for Willie Downs and Dick Lawless at Charles Town. Carty Meyerhoffer who has had two broken collar bones this year, returned to the saddle on the Friday program. Big weekend show. See you on the rail.—BILL.

Shimmer's Foul Claim Is Rejected

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 25.—The ceiling was zero for favorite players here today as Dion K. Kerr, jr's, Flying Weather led two other longshots into the wire in the $10,000-added W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap.

A. B. Hancock, jr.'s, Shimmer, with odds of 60-1 showing on the board, not only was second, three lengths behind the winner, but her rider, Logan Batcheller, registered a claim of foul. Third was the Al-Jo Stable's Cacique.

Henry Mora rode Flying Weather and Batcheller maintained the winner bumped his mount leaving the gate and again at the three-eighth pole. The stewards, however, consulted the patrol judges and then allowed the result to stand.

Flying Weather, in setting a new record for the Burch Memorial, returned an $18.20 win mutuel.

The crowd of 10,000 saw the winning son of Happy Argo, second in the Burch in 1947, turn in a time of 1.11 1/5, knocking three fifths of a second off the stake mark shared by Irisen (1948) and True North (1946).

By taking down $7725, Flying Weather upped his 1949 earnings to a comfortable $28,975. His owner is a former Washingtonian now calling Virginia his home, and is the son of Dion Kerr, veteran trainer who conditioned John Manfuso's Aneroid when the horse was the talk of the turf.

The Pincher had excuses for his rather dismal showing. The colt was off poorly, partially blocked while trying to improve position.

Lewis Jury Locked Up

tions to Judge McGuire and were called into the courtroom to receive his answers.

The questions, all written by separate jurors in different handwriting, and the judge's answers, were:

1. "Is any person who writes numbers in the District of Columbia guilty of violating the District of Columbia lottery laws?"

Answer: "Yes."

2. "Does the finding of slips written in the District, regardless of by whom written and how they reached Maryland, make those persons guilty of violating the District lottery laws?"

Answer: "If it should be found that the defendants, or any of them, aided or abetted or assisted any person in writing numbers in the District, then such defendants are principals, and you are morally bound to find them guilty. If on the other hand, you find they did not in any way aid or abet, you are morally bound to bring in a verdict of not guilty."

3. "In this case not to be decided by law and law alone?"

ANSWER. "No. You must determine the facts and apply the law to those facts."

4. A gives B a bet in the District. B takes this bet to C, a gambling establishment. C gives this bet in Maryland to D, a Maryland gambling establishment, without telling D the bet was made in the District. Is D guilty of violating the District lottery law?

ANSWER. "There is no evidence of two gambling establishments in this case and the question is therefore of no material value."

5. May the jury examine the exhabit of the three slips, enclosed in cellophane?"

ANSWER. "Yes."

6. "We are trying to connect the evidence in the case with the individual, and not the evidence to the establishment and then the establishment to the individual. Is that proper?"

ANSWER: "You are to connect the evidence to the individual, and if by so doing you connect the individual to the establishment, that is a horse of another color, a piece of circumstance that may be evidence. You are not trying a corporation here, you are trying individuals."

The three slips referred to in the jury's question 5, were slips on which James Theodore "Single Action" Trice admitted writing numbers bets prior to the raid. The slips were found at the Lewis headquarters by deputy marshals.

With no other cases being tried in District Court yesterday, the defendants and scores of their friends spent the day pacing the stone floors or sprawling on hard wooden benches.

One of the afternoon visitors was John Maragon, the ubiquitous five-percenter. He gave no explanation of his presence to reporters.

After the jury returned from supper last night, the defendants were brought a portable radio, and most of them retired to an unused jury room to listen to "This Is Your F.B.I." and the fights broadcast from Detroit.

In addition to Lewis, who lives at 4335 Blagden ave. nw., the other defendants are: John R. Mitchell, 3110 10th st. ne.; Fulton J. Mitchell, 517 10th st. ne.; George P. Scott, 1031 E st. se.; Fred Sutton, 1210 6th st. nw.; Lonnie Black, 637 L st. se.; Anie Wyck, 122 F st. nw.; Ralph Spotswood, 318 N. Henry st., Alexandria, Va.; Edward L. Hinkle, jr., 811 Presidential Gardens, Alexandria; Gregory Seger, 2801 22nd st. se.; Sterling D. Welch, 4611 Verplanck pl. nw.; Dean Kennedy, 2100 Queens Chapel rd., Avondale, Md.; Bernard J. Del-Negro, 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw., and Ellis L. Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington.

Key Government Witness Reports Threats

One of the key Government witnesses in the "Snags" Lewis gambling trial has reported to his superiors that his life was threatened Thanksgiving morning by an anonymous telephone caller.

He is deputy United States Marshal Edward J. Geraci, jr., 4819 Iowa ave. nw, who spent more than a day on the witness stand two weeks ago, identifying evidence seized when he and others raided the Bladensburg bungalow where Lewis and 13 others were arrested March 25.

Geraci said his sister had answered the telephone at approximately 10:15 a. m. Thursday, when an unidentified male asked to speak with him. He said she told the caller her brother was shaving, and she asked whether to take a message or call the deputy marshal.

Geraci reported the caller than said:

"You needn't call him. Just tell him he's a stool pigeon and he's got a short time to live. We're going to get him."

United States Attorney George Morris Fay said last night he had no comment to make on the incident "while the Lewis jury is still out."

Geraci worked in the marshal's office from 1935 to 1944. He then worked for four years with the ABC board, followed by three months with the Narcotics Division of the Treasury Department in New York, after which he returned to the marshal's office here.

two wires together and caused them to short and arc and burn off."

Major Parker said that 'If we didn't clear the wires by a substantially greater margin than three or four feet, I'll eat your bonnet."

Both officers said an inspection of the ship showed no mark whatsoever of an impact. They said that the B-17 will shudder under impact of striking a small bird in flight, but they felt none when passing the wires.

They said a combination of circumstances caused the mishap. A wind direction requiring use of a short runway (No. 35), which "butts against a hill, wires and housing," gusty winds, and a low ceiling, all entered into the picture, they said.

They apologized for "any inconvenience which may have been caused residents of the community."

Lisle L. Berkshire, 4363 Nichols ave. se., an eyewitness, told this story:

"That ship came over our apartment so low I was sure it would strike the roof. I was in the car outside with my wife and children. He had his landing lights on and I am sure he had his wheels down.

"A half block away, he struck something, because there was a terrific blue flash, and all the lights around went out.

"We live in fear of our lives out here all the time. Every time the wind is in a certain direction, those Army planes come over that way. We have complained and complained to Bolling Base, but nothing happens.

"Some day, surely, one of those ships will strike an apartment and kill a lot of people."

Berkshire said his electric clock stopped at 5:54 p. m. Bolling Base officials logged the plane's landing at 5:52 p. m.

Potomac Electric Power Co. officials said that two 4000-volt feeder lines had been cut. These operate overhead from substations to transformers which step down voltage for distribution to homes.

Pepco officials said 90 minutes after the wires were cut that they could not tell how soon damage would be repaired. They hurried repair crews to the scene. They said that the Congress Heights and Bellevue sections were without lights and power as result of the accident.

Shortly before 7 p. m., police received a report of a child injured at Chesapeake st. and Overlook dr. sw. which is not far from the scene of the wire cut. They ordered ambulances and scout cars to proceed with caution to the scene because street lights were out.

Potomac Electric Power Co., officials said that service to the area, on the two 4000-volt feeder wires and a street lighting circuit, was restored at 8 p. m. They said a 40-foot pole was broken and it was necessary to reinforce that to hold wires temporarily.

They will check today or Monday on the broken wires to determine whether the damage was caused by an impact or by burning off through a short circuit.

Confusion in the area shortly after the accident was multiplied by a false report of a traffic accident, and by a fire alarm for an overheated furnace which added to the police and fire equipment hurrying through darkened streets.

Burley Tobacco Growers Vote Today on Quotas

By The Associated Press

Growers of burley tobacco will vote in a referendum today on a proposal to continue Government marketing quotas as a device for preventing production of price-depressing surpluses.

The balloting will be held in burley-growing communities of Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Virginia, West irginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas, eGorgia, Oklahoma, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Agriculture Department officials said about 75 percent of the estimated 350,000 burley growers live in Kentucky and Tennessee.

Growers will have the privilege of voting for one of three propositions—(1) quotas for the 1950-1951 and 1952 crops; (2) quotas for the 1950 crop only or (3) no quotas at all.

Quotas must be approved by at least two thirds of the growers voting.

One of Two Women Survives Suicide Pact

New York, Nov. 25 (AP).—A strange poison-suicide pact in a hotel room today cost the life of a young, grief stricken New England widow and left another young woman gravely ill.

Police said they took arsenic capsules, The capsules were believed to have been a type used for rat poisoning.

No motive for the suicide was advanced by police. Dead was Mrs. Else Norrbom, 22, of Arlington, Mass. She had been depressed since her husband and baby died last January in a Minneapolis, Minn., auto accident. Her companion was Miss Cynthia Gilbert, also 22, once described in court as a "mental escapist" given to dressing like a man.

Miss Gilbert's condition is listed as critical in Bellevue Hospital.

Senate Bill Aided Tenants Of Low-Flying Planes in '46

The blackout in the Bolling Field area last night was not the first crisis caused by planes flying low over 1st and Chesapeake sts. sw.

As a matter of fact, that street, and military planes, caused a bill to be passed through Congress a few years ago. Same song, second verse.

It was back in 1941 that the Joseph L. Bockovac family, who lived in a two-story yellow brick house at 199 Chesapeake st. sw., decided they couldn't stand it any longer.

Military planes were coming so close they scraped the Bockovac chimney. So close their vibration shook off plaster from the walls. So close dishes jumped from shelves.

Bockovac, a retired toolmaker, took pictures to show how low the planes flew.

He went to his Congressman. A bill was introduced by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), authorizing the War Department to purchase the property.

In 1946, the bill was finally passed by Congress and signed by the President. The Army made an offer. The Bockovacs said it, too, was too low. Finally the Army took the place by condemnation, posting $25,000 in payment. It was not until February, last year, that the legal battle finally ended. The Bockovacs were awarded a $44,245 condemnation verdict.

Bockovac, who since has built a new home at 28 Franklin st., in Kensington, Md., last night was told of the new incident.

"Did it hit the house?" he asked.

He was assured that it had not.

Present occupants of the house are Chief Warrant Officer Frank Weirauch, 48, his wife, Helen, and their three children. They were assigned to the dwelling when the Air Force took it over in December, 1947.

Mrs. Weirauch was on the porch when she spotted the B-17 and shouted to her husband who is musical director of the Air Force Bandsmen's School at Bolling Field:

"There's one coming in very close."

Before her husband could respond, she later said, "There was a bluish flash like lightning and all the lights went out."

"I looked out the window and saw the plane make an unwavering landing approach," he said, "and knew it was okay."

Prejudiced Survey By VA Is Charged

By the United Press

The Veterans Administration was accused yesterday of making a prejudiced survey of schools giving courses under the GI bill of rights.

The charge was made by Dr. Francis J. Brown, staff associate of the American Council of Education, who said VA is preparing "a totally false picture" of GI education for Congress.

The council, representing nonprofit public and private schools and colleges, has been a strong critic of VA regulations restricting the types of schools and courses available to veterans.

Brown said the VA has sent out telegrams to its regional offices asking for information "only on the very small number of abuses of the GI bill." He said the telegram asks for no information about cases "where the relationship between the schools and VA are excellent."

"If these questions are answered faithfully by regional offices they will develop a totally false picture of the over-all relathionship between the institutions, both profit and nonprofit, and the 2,600,000 veterans who are taking courses under the GI bill," he said.

A VA spokesman said a congressional committee on veterans affairs has directed the agency to present a survey of GI education "including abuses," by February 1.

Brown conceded that there probably have been "many cases" of abuse, but said the veterans agency was ignoring the possibilities of a "constructive approach to the problem." He suggested VA take one of two steps:

1. "Apply the same formula on tuition and fees to profit schools as is now applied to non-profit institutions."

2. "Give the State supervisory bodies, which worked so successfully in regulating on-the-job training, enough money to supervise the rest of the GI educational provisions."

Hospital Suspends Two In Cab Driver's Death

Detroit, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—Charges that a fatally injured man was neglected and turned out of a city-owned hospital led today to the suspension of a doctor and a nurses' supervisor.

Dr. Noel Powers, night physician, and Supervisor Edith Bagley were suspended by Dr. Ralph R. Piper, superintendent of Receiving Hospital, for violating hospital regulations.

Louis Schwartz, 35-year-old taxi driver, died last Sunday after he was removed by relatives from Receiving Hospital where his injuries were diagnosed as "just a few cuts."

Hoover Plans Address Here At Reorganization Session

Herbert Hoover will make a major speech at the National Reorganization conference opening at the Shoreham Hotel on December 12, the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report announced last night.

The two-day bi-partisan conference of leaders from civic, agriculture and commercial groups has been called to press for swift action on Hoover commission recommendations for reorganization of the executive branch. Hoover will speak at a dinner climaxing the first day of the session.

Appointment of Dr. Leonard D. White, public administrator and educator, as chairman of the schools and university committee of the citizens committee, meanwhile was announced by Dr. Robert L. Johnson, national chairman of the group.

Dr. White in a statement said students should add their voice "to the growing demand by all public-spirited citizens . . . for economy and efficiency in Government." He called adoption of the Hoover report "essential to the national economy."

Dr. White is professor of public administration at the University of Chicago, vice president of the National Civil Service League and a former president of the American Society for Public Administration.

Bed Hit by Auto, Couple Sleeps On

San Francisco, Nov. 25 (U.P.).—A runaway auto careened down a steep hill, smashed through a fence, bashed in the wall of a bedroom where Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Faris were sleeping and knocked the bed half way through the wall.

Faris did not wake up until police arrived.

"I felt a little chilly," he said.

Chest Drive Redoubled As It Enters Final Lap

With the Thanksgiving holiday over, Washington area Community Chest workers yesterday geared for the home stretch drive—$878,928.12 to go.

Contributions, totaling $3,112,790.88 to date, have come from only 303,901 persons. The donations represent 77.98 percent of the $3,991,719 goal, which Red Feather campaign headquarters hope to reach next week.

Jerry Klutiz is on a short vacation. His Federal Diary column will be resumed on Saturday, December 3.

And Edwin Lewis, director of public relations for the Community Chest Federation, is counting on receiving the good news at the three scheduled meetings next week.

There will be a general report luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday at the Washington Hotel. Business Unit II, covering the smaller firms, will meet at the same hour and place Wednesday, as Business Units I and II and the Government agencies will on Thursday.

Wright Family Head Gets Job In Postoffice

Things were a little brighter for the Wrights yesterday.

Stanley Wright, husband and father of the eight-member family, had a promise of a temporary job at the Postoffice Department, starting Thursday and lasting until the Christmas rush is over. The pay is $1.20 an hour.

The family was broken up when a job Wright had as a painter at National Airport ran out in three weeks instead of three months, as had been expected. He had not been able to find work until yesterday, except for odd jobs.

Wright also had two prospects yesterday for what sounded like permanent work. He is to see these prospects Monday, he said.

Wright said this means that as soon as he earns enough money to pay a week's rent in advance, he and his wife can move into a light housekeeping room and start saving toward the time they can reclaim their family.

Wright, who is now receiving temporary shelter at a veteran's home, said he hoped to make the necessary money by doing odd jobs this weekend.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Virginia Wright and her two smallest of the six children are still guests at the Emergency Home for Women and Children, operated by the Salvation Army at 1608 New Hampshire ave. nw. The Salvation Army is a Community Chest agency. Two others are at the Central Union Mission, and the remaining two are at the Industrial Home School Annex.

Present plan is, Wright said, to put the two smallest children in St. Anne's Infant Asylum, another Chest agency, until he and Mrs. Wright can work their way out of their financial plight and set up a family again.

Turkey Dispute Leads to Arrest Of Dinner Host

A fight over who should stuff the Thanksgiving turkey landed Wayne Spiggle, 30, of 1356 Fairmont st. nw., in Municipal Court yesterday charged with assault.

Spiggle pleaded innocent and was placed under $600 bond for jury trial January 11. In explaining the circumstances to Judge Armond W. Scott, defense attorney James K. Hughes said the turkey was bought by Spiggle and the stuffing by his guest, Virgil E. Horsley, 31, 1368 Euclid st. nw.

The victims, police say, are Horsley, who lost two teeth, and Spiggles wife, Rosalie, who suffered face scratches.

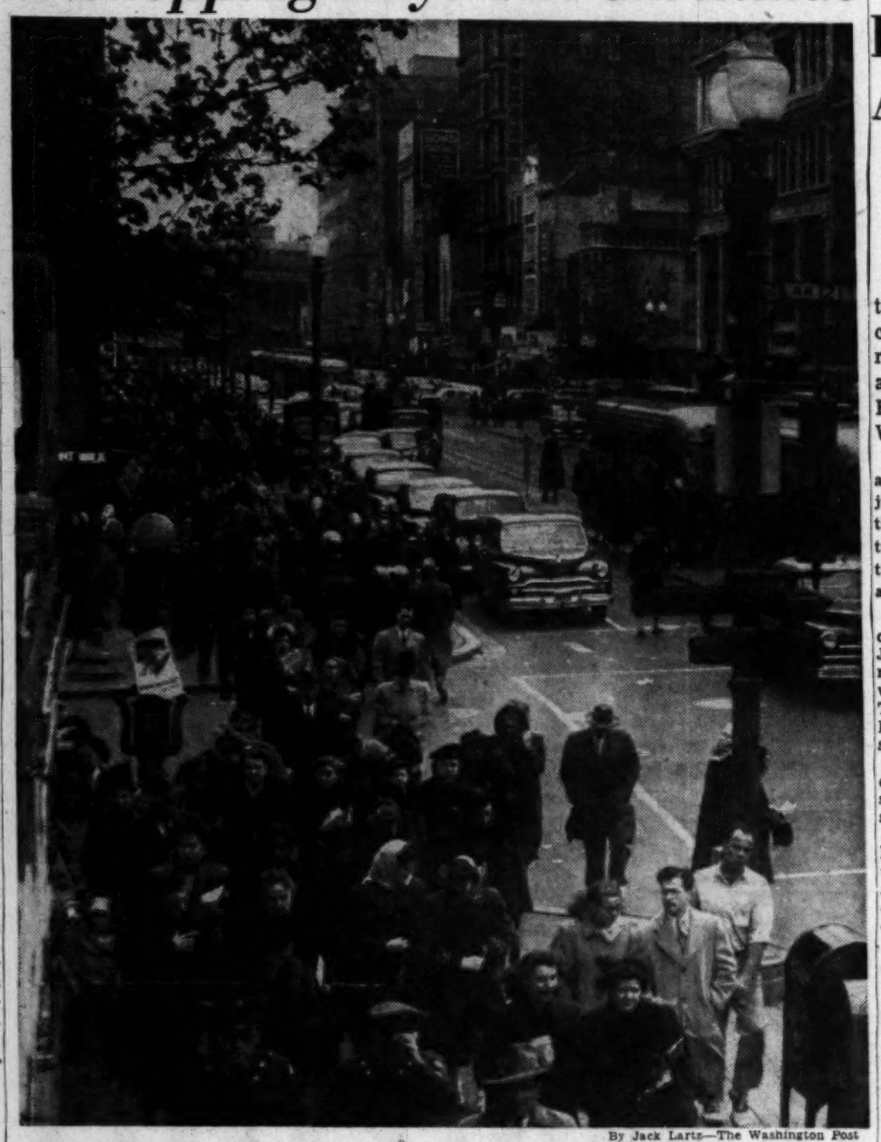
25 Shopping Days Till Christmas



By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

This was the scene yesterday at 12th and F sts. nw., as holiday shoppers hustle about

The Christmas shopping rush is on.

With Thanksgiving a memory, thousands of Washington residents flocked downtown yesterday to start preparations for the next big holiday.

Most of the downtown stores were jammed. Parking lots were full and streets crowded, with traffic moving slowly. Anticipating a big rush, the Police Department detailed 25 extra men at downtown intersections. The extra men will be on duty today and next Saturday and daily from December 9 to Christmas.

Many youngsters, enjoying a long weekend holiday from school, came downtown with their mothers to look over the toy situation.

Government workers, who did not leave the city for the long weekend, but stayed at their desks yesterday, are expected to make an even bigger rush on the stores today.

One department store spokesman declared happily:

"We have a rush the Friday after Thanksgiving every year. It marks the opening of the Christmas season. But yesterday's crowd was the biggest we've had on that day in several years. Looks like it will be a good season for the stores."

Firm Wins Zoning Plea In Arlington

An Arlington real estate firm dropped a complaint against the county yesterday when the Commonwealth's attorney ruled that the company may build a gas station on property near the county courthouse.

Thomas W. Phillips, lawyer for McClaine Properties, Inc., announced withdrawal of a petition for writ of mandamus to compel county authorities to issue a building permit for the station at Wilson blvd. and N. Courthouse rd. The petition was filed earlier this week in Arlington Circuit Court.

Phillips asked the court to force Building Inspector Andrew Jensen and County Manager A. T. Lundberg to issue the permit. He also asked that Planning Engineer C. L. Kinnier stop "persuading" Jensen and Lundberg to withhold the permit.

Lundberg said, after the suit was filed, that the permit was denied because the county board previously turned down a "use permit" for the filling station. Approval of the use permit has customarily been necessary, in the case of gas stations, before a building permit is issued, he said.

Rucker said yesterday, however, after careful review of the ordinance, that the county board actually must issue a use permit only when the property in question is zoned for local commercial use (C-1). The McClaine property is zoned for general commercial use (C-2).

2 New Polio Cases Reported Here

Two new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in the District this week, bringing the total of District cases this year to 106 and the Washington area total to 243. Last year at this time 131 cases had been reported in the District.

New cases reported were a 9-year-old boy of the 4600 block of Kenmore dr. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital, and a 2-year-old boy of the 3500 block of T st nw. admitted to Georgetown University Hospital.

Number of new cases reported throughout the country declined last week for the thirteenth consecutive week, the Public Health Service announced yesterday, with 735 cases reported. Total number of cases reported in 1949 through November 19 was 40,523, PHS said, compared with 25,775 for the same period last year.

Hebrew School Pupils Taking Part in Tag Day

Nearly 2000 pupils of the Hebrew schools in Washington will take part in the semiannual Tag Day collections which begin today under the sponsorship of the Washington Council of the Jewish National Fund.

Money taken in is to be used for land acquisition, soil amelioration, water supply and settlement in Israel.

Old Masters Weren't Bores, Art Show Crowds Discover

There was only one bored visitor yesterday at the fabulous Vienna Art Treasures at National Gallery. She was aged 6.

But the couple down the street, enjoying a long Thanksgiving weekend, and their aunt from Peoria, visiting them over the holidays, were anything but bored.

From their comments, asides and sighings, they were amazed, dazzled and perhaps just a little abashed by all that beauty.

Aunt Is Baffled

And being abashed leads people to say some strange things, ask some strange questions.

The aunt—like quite a few of yesterday's 35,584 visitors—insisted, right out loud, that she couldn't understand where "they can possibly keep the salt and the pepper" in the famed Cellini Salt Cellar.

It took a discourse from the exhibition catalogue to settle that.

Then there were the Spinster Sisters.

They walked in somewhat breathless, and the older one put her foot down, gently of course.

"There is soo-oo much to see, dear," she said. "So we must agree that we can't stop too long at any one thing."

They went through 129 paintings, 32 sculptures, 2 miniatures, 6 Greek and Roman antiquities—some 278 works of art in all—in 1 hour, 10 minutes: about par for the course.

Before the Cattaneo, "Portrait of an Old Man," they decided: "Ah, they lived so long then."

Of Velazquez's unflattering oil of Philip IV of Spain, the younger one declared:

"Oh, isn't he a hard one!"

The older one replied, "Yes! Can you imagine anyone so insipid and wicked!" and on they moved.

A young university student stood before a Rubens, the figures magnificently unclad. He turned to his date: "I wonder why they painted such large canvases?"

But she was absorbed in another Rubens, the figures magnificently clad this time. She replied:

"Guess that's the way they wore them."

Costumes also fascinated a tall gentleman in tweeds and his short companion in a worsted. They had decided to cope with art in a skeptical, sophisticated and humorously sarcastic fashion.

Men's Fashion Note

They looked at Clouet's formal, full-length portrait of Charles IX of France. Said Mr. Tweed concerning the gold cloth cape, pantaloons and stockings:

"I really don't think that's the costume of the moment."

Replied Mr. Worsted: "Thank God not!"

Behind them a portly woman of about 50 decided of Charles IX: "Why would anyone want to be so skinny?"

But the major attraction at the exhibition seems to be the work of the goldsmiths, silversmiths and jewelers.

Mary Garden, the former opera star, who was yesterday's most famous guest, announced that her favorite was the unguent jar carved from a single emerald.

Emeralds, she announced, are her favorite jewels.

Another out-of-town visitor was enthralled over the collection of crystal. Her husband was 10 feet behind her when she called:

"Irv, come here Irv, isn't this the most tremendous thing. Do you realize this was done in the"—she looked at the identification card—"sixteenth century, when they didn't have modern tools?"

Irv agreed with a grin.

Looks Betray Emotions

The comments and quotes weren't the giveaway. Like Irv, approval is facial. Looks of awe, entrancement, fascination, unbelief. These were followed with dull, satiated expressions as visitors rested their feet in the lounges.

Which brings up the bored young lady, obviously brought to the exhibition over her limp and protesting body.

She sniffed around the armor collection—a favorite of the small fry—as if it were old hat. As far as she was concerned, it should have been left in some stuffy old salt mine.

She walked, just beyond mother's reach, and muttered, over and over:

"This is all so educational. This is all so educational."

Total Attendance At Exhibit 127,586

The "Art Treasures from the Vienna Collections" exhibit at the National Gallery of Art drew 35,584 persons yesterday—the largest attendance since the opening day record of 41,275.

Total attendance now stands at 127,586.

The collection is open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. weekdays, and from 2 to 10 p. m. Sundays. It will remain in Washington through Sunday, January 22.

Examinations Set For Navy Medical Corps Candidates

Examinations for the selection of candidates for appointments as lieutenants (junior grade) in the Medical Corps of the United States Navy will be conducted at all naval hospitals, January 16-20.

Eligible are graduates of approved medical schools in United States or Canada who have completed intern training in accredited hospitals, or who will complete such training within four months of the examination date, it was announced.

Detailed information may be obtained from the nearest naval officer procurement office or from the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department, Washington, 25, D. C.

Sailor, Girls Held After Auto Crash

Car Theft Charged Following Collision Of Two Vehicles Near Woodbridge, Va.

A 19-year-old sailor and his two girl companions were charged with auto theft after ramming into an oncoming car at 8 a. m. yesterday on U. S. Route 1, half a mile south of Woodbridge, Va.

The sailor, William J. Stanaway, and four other persons were injured. Stanaway was admitted to the Quantico Hospital with a fractured left ankle. The others, treated there for cuts and bruises and released, were:

Josephine Elizabeth Brunck, 24, of 4607 College ave., and Mrs. Juanita Force, 23, of 4806 Erskine rd., both of College Park, Md., who were Stanaway's companions, and Talmadge Wilson, jr., and Howard Roberts, 30, both of 440 Lamont st. nw.

Wilson and Roberts, occupants of the second car, are pharmacy school students at Howard University.

According to Virginia State police, one of the girls said Stanaway went to sleep at the wheel and his car, traveling north, swung over into the far lane and collided with the Wilson vehicle.

After the accident, State police said, the car driven by Stanaway was reported stolen from Belvoir Lodge, a tourist camp near Fort Belvoir in Fairfax County.

Fairfax County Police served a warrant charging auto theft on Stanaway at the hospital and held the two girls on the same charge.

Miss Brunck was released in $500 bond and ordered to appear for a hearing December 30 in Fairfax County Court at Fairfax. Mrs. Force, unable to obtain bond, was detained by Fairfax County police.

Meanwhile, another traffic fatality was added to Maryland's holiday toll with the death of a 63-year-old bridge tender for the State Roads Commission a half hour after he was struck by a taxi near his home outside Annapolis. He was James F. Bullen.

Anne Arundel County Police said Bullen was hit while walking on a country road. Richard E. Ennis of Parole, Md., driver of the cab, was charged with reckless driving and manslaughter.

Bandits Get $284 in Two Holdups Here

Police yesterday were searching for three gun-wielding bandits who obtained a total of $284 in two holdups within a 24-hour period.

Two of the bandits obtained $174 from a Western Union office. The two were wearing handkerchief masks, according to police.

Mrs. Thelma Carver, 22, of 1324 Euclid st. nw., the manager, told officers the men entered shortly before closing time, Thursday night. The office is at 3710 Macomb st. nw. She said they held her and George Booze, 28, of Kensington, Md., a messenger, at gunpoint. They took the money from a cabinet, she said, and backed out of the office.

Roy Stewart, 35, of 1450 Q st. nw., told police he was robbed of $110 early yesterday after leaving a gathering at 1344 Riggs st. nw. He said he was approached by a man who had been around the place earlier, and asked for $5. When he took out his money, he said, the man produced a gun and said, "I'll take it all." He did.

Baltimore Man Slugged, Robbed of $70 Here

Abraham Bogratz, 48, a Baltimore insurance man, last night was slugged, beaten up and robbed of about $70 while walking on H st., near 1st st. sw., police reported. He was admitted to Providence Hospital with a severe laceration on the left forehead and a broken right ankle. His condition was undetermined.

According to police, Bogratz was hit over the left eye with a heavy object by one of two men.

Dynamite Ruled Out in Fatal Blast

Montgomery County police have definitely ruled out the possibility that the wood stove blast which caused the death of Mrs. Lucille Allnut of Dawsonville, last Tuesday was set off by dynamite.

It was thought at first that the explosion might have been caused by pieces of dynamite imbedded in the firewood. The wood came from stumps that had been uprooted last spring by dynamite, an investigation showed.

A careful sifting of ashes and stove fragments, however, disclosed no traces of the explosive, Lieut. G. W. Linthicum, county detective head, said yesterday.

"We still believe the explosion was accidental," he said, "but we are sending the parts of the stove to the FBI for examination."

Mrs. Allnutt, wife of Benoni Allnutt, was fatally injured when cut by flying particles of the stove in the kitchen of her farm home.

Amnesia Girl Wired Funds, Returns to N.Y.

An attractive girl amnesia victim who has been in Gallinger Hospital since November 2, was put aboard a train yesterday for New York City and home.

She is Carol May Harrison, whose age was finally determined as 19. As her memory returned, following a "truth serum" experiment at the hospital at week ago, she told authorities there and policewomen she had worked both as a model and a waitress.

She said she lived with her mother, Mrs. Letha A. Harrison, of Jackson Heights, New York City, who is separated from her father. Police received funds for her return by telegraph from her mother. A Women's Bureau detective placed her on the train. The girl said she had left home on previous occasions, but always returned voluntarily.

Police were attempting yesterday to locate a suitcase and belongings which Carol May told them she had left in a rooming house, which she couldn't identify. She walked into police headquarters on November 2 and told officers: "I don't know who I am or where I am going."

Sheriff Stopped In Lobby by Dormitory Policy

A strict "no men allowed" policy at the Government's Arlington Farms dormitories for girls is giving Arlington Deputy Sheriff Carl Taylor a tough time.

Taylor, who's a kindly and reliable man, merely wants to serve a civil warrant on a young resident of Nebraska Hall, whose doctor says she owes him money.

Suspicious officials of the dormitory, however, insist "it's a girls' dormitory and we're not allowed behind the desk," Taylor says.

The deputy sheriff, who is allowed to sit in the lobby, made his second try last night at delivering the warrant, but said he waited two hours in vain for the elusive girl. He could serve it, simply by posting it on the door of her room—if he could just get past that desk—Taylor explains sadly.

Pedestrian of Week

'Elderly' Man Of 50 Gets Laugh at Title

Gregory Merson, stapler salesman from Catonsville, Md., was right sporting about being named "elderly pedestrian of the week."

Merson

He's only 50 years old.

And the elderly pedestrian of the week stunt is aimed at reducing the number of traffice accidents to persons 60 and over.

But if the District government people seemed to think he fitted the bill for an elderly pedestrian—well, vigorous, healthy-looking Gregory Merson figured he'd take it like a good sport.

In a frank confession to a reporter, however, he laughingly said he'd almost crossed in the middle of the street, instead of at the south-side intersection of 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

With Merson was his wife, Lillian, who was "startled but delighted to find anybody giving anybody else an award for doing anything like just crossing the street."

At which point in the interview, her husband good-naturedly remarked that when the policeman, Pvt. Harold Riep, 34, of the Traffic Division, first accosted him, Merson thought he'd committed a violation.

It all happened at 2 p. m. yesterday, the fourth consecutive week that the stunt has been held under sponsorship of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board.

Man's Clean Record Spoiled by Slashing

James Bowman, 39, of 138 Pierce st. nw., was convicted yesterday of cutting two 3-inch gashes in the face of Fred Willey, 58, of the 1100 block Half st. sw.

When Judge Armond W. Scott was informed that Bowman had no prior criminal record, the jurist replied:

"Well, he has now. Three hundred sixty days in jail."

D. C. Street Inspector Killed by Road Roller

Louis F. Woods, Jr. Crushed Beneath 10-Ton Machine On Benning Rd. N. E.

Louis F. Woods, jr., 37, an inspector with the District Department of Highways, was crushed to death beneath a 10-ton road roller yesterday on Benning rd. ne.

The accident happened at about 1:45 p. m. on a stretch of Benning rd. which is under construction, between Kingman Lake Bridge and Benning Bridge.

Woods' head was crushed under the giant roller. His body was removed to the morgue where he was pronounced dead by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Police said the operator of the roller which killed Woods was Russell Y. Baldwin, 23, of 4509 Riverdale rd., Riverdale, Md.

According to Lieut. William Liverman, head of the Police Accident Investigation Unit, who visited the scene, this is what happened:

The streetcar tracks on Benning rd. have been ripped up, and the south side of Benning rd., which would handle east-bound traffic, is blockaded for construction.

The road rollers work in pairs going forward a stretch of about 50 feet, then backing up for the same distance.

The accident happened while the two road rollers were backing up. The roller nearest the center of the street, operated by B. K. Canard of Fairfax, Va., had a lead on the roller operated by Baldwin.

Woods, who was at the scene as a representative of the Department of Highways, saw Canard's roller and started to cross over immediately after it had passed him. However, he stepped in the path of the backing roller of Baldwin.

Woods had his head turned and did not see the roller operated by Baldwin bearing down on him.

From the corner of one eye, Canard saw what was happening, but even then one of Woods' feet had been caught under the roller.

Canard shouted a warning to Baldwin, and the latter threw his machinery into reverse. But by this time the heavy roller had passed over Woods' head. The roller was moving only about 3 miles an hour.

Dr. MacDonald said he is withholding a death certificate pending further investigation. Baldwin was released in the custody of his employer, the construction firm of Curtin & Johnson.

Police said the fatality would be classified as an industrial death rather than a traffic death.

Woods, who lived at 3540 Van Ness st. nw., was born in the Panama Canal Zone but had lived most of his life in Washington.

He began working for the Department of Highways in 1926 when he was only 14, as a checker during summer vacations. He became a full-time employe in 1931. He had worked up to the post of chief inspector.

His duties called upon him to inspect construction work let out by the Department of Highways to private contractors.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Belle Woods; two children, Louis Woods, 6, and Emily Woods, 3; a brother, Robert Woods, and his mother, Mrs. Louis F. Woods, sr., of Arlington, Va.

Man Critically Injured By Dupont Cir. Shovel

A 52-year-old construction worker was injured critically yesterday when he was pinned against an embankment by the counterweight of a power shovel at Dupont Circle.

He is Rocco Narni, of 414 10th st., sw., who was taken to Emergency Hospital with multiple fractured ribs, back injuries and possible internal injuries.

The accident occurred shortly after 1 p. m., when the shovel swung around, and the counterweight at the rear knocked Narni up against the four-foot embankment he was helping to demolish, witnesses said. Narni had his back to the shovel.

Gen. Hayes, Famous In Sport World, Dies

MAJ. GEN. PHILIP HAYES
He was 62

Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes (USA ret.), who was commanding general of the old Third Service Command from 1943 until he retired in 1946, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital. He was 62.

General Hayes had been in the hospital since November 9, when he collapsed while attending a business conference in Washington as president of the Uranium Mining & Development Corp.

He had been associated with the corporation, formed by a group of New Yorkers, for about a year. Death was attributed to cerebral hemorrhage.

For two years after his retirement in 1946 he was president of the Tower Realty Co., which operates the Tower Building in Baltimore and Radio Station WCUM in Cumberland, Md.

Well known in sports circles, General Hayes played football and was captain of hockey and track teams at West Point as a member of the class of 1909. He also was a member of the football coaching staff at one time.

After graduation from West Point, he remained as an instructor until 1916 when he was assigned to the Philippines for two years. He returned to West Point in 1919 as post exchange officer, and later was executive officer for athletics.

His other tours of duty included the Field Artillery School at Fort Sill, Okla.; the War College here; Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., where he was an instructor for five years; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.; Fort Knox, Ky., and Fort Shafter, Hawaii.

He was chief of staff of the Hawaiian Department in 1940 under Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short until three weeks before Pearl Harbor, when he was returned to the United States.

He was appointed professor of military science and tactics at Harvard, then in 1942 was named chief of staff for the First Service Command, Boston. A year later he assumed the command of the Third Service Command, which covered Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Baltimore.

A bachelor, he leaves his twin sister, Helen Hayes, and his mother, Mrs. Mary F. Hayes, with whom he had lived in Baltimore.

Services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday in the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Grand Forks, N. Dak.

Requiem mass will be offered at 10 a. m. Monday at the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be Wednesday at Grand Forks, S. Dak. Friends are being received at the Joseph Gawler's Sons funeral home, 1756 Pennsylvania ave., nw.

Honorary pallbearers will be Generals Jacob L. Devers, Robert L. Eichelberger, James Ord and Thomas B. Catron, and Col. Thurston U. Hughes, all classmates with General Hayes at West Point; Generals Brehon Somervell, J. Reed Kilpatrick of New York, William A. Barron, jr., of Boston, and Joseph F. Battley, of Washington; Daniel L. Boland of Washington, Alexis Thompson of New York; Daniel Simonds of Flitchburg, Mass., W. Gamble Woodward, jr., of New York, Col. Clement Kennedy of Swampscott, Mass., and Samuel Katz, of Baltimore.

Quisenberry Funeral Set For Monday

A. H. Quisenberry, 41, Washington resident for the past four years, died Thursday in Georgetown Hospital of a heart ailment. Funeral services will be held Monday in Indianapolis.

Mr. Quisenberry

Mr. Quisenberry lived at 1967 Biltmore st. nw., a salesman with the Hundley Tire Co., 3446 14th st. nw.

A native of Indianapolis, Mr. Quisenberry had been in the tire business since his graduation from Indiana University in 1930. He was a tire examiner for western North Carolina with the Office of Price Administration.

Mr. Quisenberry leaves his wife, Mrs. Ethel B. Quisenberry; a daughter, Mrs. E. T. Elstner of Parris Island, S. C.; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Quisenberry, and a brother, Herbert, of Indianapolis.

Miss Marguerite C. Prescott

Carl Hechmer Dies; Sanitary Engineer, 54

Carl A. Hechmer, sr., 54, maintenance engineer for the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, died late Thursday in Sibley Hospital after a brief illness.

Mr. Hechmer

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Hechmer had been engaged in sanitary engineering for 35 years, primarily in the maintenance and operation of water and sewage systems. He was a graduate of Baltimore Polytechnic Institute and was employed by the Baltimore public water department and the Maryland Health Department before joining the Sanitary Commission in 1918.

Mr. Hechmer was an active member of numerous professional societies and a past president of the Maryland-Delaware Water and Sewerage Association. He belonged to the American Society of Civil Engineers, and a director of the Chesapeake section of the American Water Works Association. In 1940, he was selected by the Chesapeake section for the George W. Fuller Award for outstanding service.

Mr. Hechmer, who lived at 4905 Somerset rd., Riverdale, was instrumental in establishing at the University of Maryland, short courses for water works operators. The courses are sponsored by the Maryland-Delaware Water and Sewerage Association and have been given under Mr. Hechmer's supervision since their inception.

Mr. Hechmer is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Dove Hechmer; a son, Carl A. Hechmer, jr., 5424 55th pl., East Riverdale; a daughter, Mrs. David H. Mueller, 1507 East-West hwy., Silver Spring and a brother, George R. Hechmer, Baltimore.

Funeral services will be held in St. Jerome's Church, Hyattsville, Monday at 10 a. m. Other arrangements have not been completed.

Jack Walton, Ex-Governor Of Oklahoma, Dies at 68

Oklahoma City, Nov. 25 (AP).—J. C. (Jack) Walton, 68, impeached and removed from office as Oklahoma Governor in 1923, died today. Mr. Walton, who served 10 months as Governor before his ouster, was in failing health for several years.

Mr. Walton

Gov. Roy J. Turner ordered the flag on the State Capitol flown at half staff today. Funeral services will be held Monday.

Mr. Walton was ousted from office during a bitter Ku Klux Klan fight.

In the 1930s he was elected to the State Corporation Commission. Mr. Walton was born on an Indiana farm in March, 1881. He later became a railroad worker and then a railroad executive, electrical engineer and traveling salesman before he entered politics and the oil business.

His first major political office was as mayor of Oklahoma City in 1919.

He was elected Governor in 1922. He declared open warfare on the Ku Klux Klan in Oklahoma following his election to the governorship. He proclaimed martial law September 15, 1923. He ordered all residents in Oklahoma City off the streets between midnight and 5 a. m. and prohibited the carrying of guns.

On September 25 he issued a military order forbidding the Legislature to meet. The legislators convened anyway and were dispersed by the troops.

Mr. Walton offered to resign if the Legislature would halt a grand jury investigation of his official acts and allow him to sign a bill unmasking the Ku Klux Klan.

The Legislature convened on October 11 and refused the Governor's offer, impeaching him 12 days later.

R. J. Grant, 87, Once Director Of Mint, Dies

Robert J. Grant, 87, a former mining associate of Herbert Hoover, died yesterday in Pasadena, Calif. He had been ill since 1942.

Mr. Grant was director of the Mint here from 1923 to 1933. He left to take charge of the Chinese mint in Shanghai and taught the Chinese to make silver dollars that could not be easily counterfeited.

Equipped with modern machinery and patterned after the Philadelphia mint, the Shanghai mint turned out a record 66,500,000 Chinese dollars worth of silver coins in the first year of operation under Mr. Grant.

Born in Nova Scotia, Mr. Grant became an American citizen. He worked with Hoover in the early 1900s. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Frederick Dunham, Hollywood, and a granddaughter.

Funeral services will be at 2:30 p. m. Saturday in Pasadena.

Arthur Hawes Lindsay

Milwaukee, Nov. 25 (AP).—Arthur Hawes Lindsay, 87, a Milwaukee banker for 71 years, died early today at his home.

He was honorary chairman of the board of the Marine National Exchange Bank, a director of the Phoenix Hosiery Co. and the Northwestern National Insurance Co.

He predicted the 1929 financial crash some nine months before it occurred, and on the day when nearly every other bank in Milwaukee was closed, the Marine Bank remained open and paid out millions of dollars. This included the entire payroll of the City of Milwaukee.

Lindsay, twice-married, is survived by his wife, two brothers and a sister.

Helen Traubel Coaching Her, Margaret Confirms; Denies Romance Rumors

By Sonia Stein

MISS MARGARET TRUMAN yesterday confirmed the report that she has been studying in New York with famous soprano Helen Traubel, and denied all rumors that she was engaged.

Here to sing in Constitution Hall Sunday afternoon, Miss Truman held a press conference at the White House yesterday. "I would like very much to answer that question," the President's daughter said when queried about Miss Traubel. "I've been studying with Miss Traubel since February. She is a very great soprano and a wonderful person," Miss Truman said.

Miss Traubel and her husband, William Bass, are staying at Blair House with the First Family and will attend Margaret's concert Sunday, when she will appear with the National Symphony Orchestra.

While Margaret is on tour, Miss Traubel flies to her concerts whenever she can, the President's daughter explained. "She flew from Texas to St. Louis when I appeared there," she added, "and had to fly right back for her own concert."

Although she didn't meet the Metropolitan Opera star until five or six years ago, as she remembers it, Margaret says she has "always known of her because we are fellow Missourians."

Margaret wore a dark blue fitted coat, dark blue suit and matching velvet hat, for the interview in the White House movie projection room yesterday. She said she was "looking forward to Sunday's concert and would especially enjoy singing with the National Symphony, to which she used to listen on Sunday afternoons when she was living in Washington.

She is also looking forward to having her father hear her sing again, for the first time in almost two years. Her last appearance in Washington was December 22, 1947, in a concert in Constitution Hall, for which she had piano and flute accompaniment.

She said that her father seemed "quite in favor of a career" for her. "After all, he gets to go to a concert," she said with a smile.

Nothing to Engagements

ON THE MATTER OF ROMANCES rumored in her life, Margaret was very definite. About Frank P. Handy, son of an Ypsilanti, Mich., publisher, she said, "There's absolutely nothing to it. He's a very charming gentleman."

Rumors that she was engaged to Ed Wall, a newspaperman, "surprised" her, she said, because she has "never even shaken hands with him."

Said Margaret with a laugh, "If they are going to rumor me engaged, I wish they would pick someone I know."

About another romance, Margaret was enthusiastic. The Vice President and Mrs. Barkely—then Mrs. Hadley—had come back stage to see her when she appeared in St. Louis. They didn't tell her about their engagement, "but I thought something was popping," Margaret said.

Six-Day Holiday Next

FOLLOWING the concert Sunday, Miss Truman will be honored at a reception at the Raleigh Hotel given by the American Newspaper Women's Club. Then she'll take a six-day holiday with her parents in Key West, Fla., before heading back for more study with Miss Traubel in New York. The Washington concert which is "the twelfth, or fourteenth" finishes the first part of her tour, but she will go on tour again February 1 and continue through March. Beyond that, her plans are indefinite, but she made it clear she plans to continue singing.

"I wouldn't be working so hard and cooking my own meals if I wasn't serious, would I?" she asked. She and Miss Reathel M. Odum, White House secretary who lives with her in an apartment hotel in New York, do their own cooking.

"I not only don't like to cook, I loathe it," said Margaret. "We have a cooking dictionary and when I see a recipe that requires three or four hours, I just say, 'well, that's that,' and send downstairs for some food," she admitted.

Margaret, who missed Thanksgiving dinner with her family—having been in New York with friends—said she hoped she'd have turkey last night.

Watches Health, Not Scales

Margaret, who is a trifle plumper than when she was a coed at George Washington University, says she never watches the scales. "I watch my health instead," she said, and she looked radiant and rested at yesterday's conference.

Her usual concert-day regime includes voice practice in the morning, reading in the afternoon—"I'm going through Shakespeare again on the tour"—and a steak and baked potato for dinner. "Sunday I'll have my steak at 1 o'clock," she pointed out, since the concert is an afternoon event.

Besides studying music and getting coaching in German and Italian, which she is able to sing but cannot speak, she tries "to live a normal life." She does avoid nightclubbing, however, because "smoke bothers me and I don't like temperamental prima donnas who go about asking their escorts and friends not to smoke. I just stay away from it."

She admitted her "family might have different ideas" about her being a temperamental prima donna but said she tries not to be.

Margaret said that she doesn't fly because she "promised mother I wouldn't." In reply to a query on whether Mrs. Truman had ever asked the President not to fly, she said, "I'm afraid it wouldn't do much good." She added that all three of them would probably fly to Key West.

The young singer claims she doesn't miss Washington, execpt for her friends, but she did mind missing the Shah of Iran when he was here. His gift to her of a miniature of her father in a large frame of ivory inlaid with mosaic pleased her very much she said.

Married Yesterday

Glogau

MRS AUSTIN BURT MIDDLETON, the former Miss Suzanne Juvenal, was married yesterday afternoon at First Presbyterian Church, Findlay, Ohio. She is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. William Williams Juvenal of Findlay. The bridegroom, a Marine Corps lieutenant, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Austin B. Middleton of Deer Lodge, Mont. The newly weds will make their home at Camp Lejeune, N. C., where Lieutenant Middleton is stationed.

Legion Auxiliary Has 100,000 Veterans On Christmas List

By Genevieve Reynolds

MEMBERS of the D. C. Department, American Legion Auxiliary, will begin whittling down one of the longest Christmas shopping lists in the world next week, according to Mrs. Loretta Reed, gift shop chairman. On the auxiliary's national Christmas list are more than 100,000 veterans who will spend the Yuletide holidays in Veterans hospitals.

Across the Nation, auxiliary members will purchase gifts for the hospitalized veterans. Here in Washington, the auxiliary women will provide gifts for the veterans and their families in Mount Alto and Saint Elizabeth's hospitals. District unit gift shop and rehabilitation chairmen, together with Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Rosetta Wells, cochairman of the D. C. Department's Gift Shop, will visit each ward at Mount Alto, Thursday, December 1, 6:30 p. m. to ascertain what gifts the patients would like to send their families or other dependents. Then the veterans will be able to choose their presents from the auxiliary's shops, which will be set up in the hospitals. Lack of money will be no obstacle, for the gift articles are donated by the auxiliary. Auxiliary members also wrap and mail out of town packages.

Mrs. Ritter to Exhibit Paintings

AT THE YOUTHFUL age of 70, Mrs. Louise Ritter began to paint to forget her arthritic pains. All went happily for one year. Then last January the spirited woman broke her right arm. A few days later she began to paint with her left hand, found that she was ambidexterous and her art was in her left hand. Fourteen of her oil paintings will be spotlighted at the University Women's Club's art exhibit opening Monday. November 28, at the clubhouse, 1515 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Seventy-two-year-old Mrs. Ritter paints landscapes, floral and marine scenes. She studied art when she was a student at the University of Nebraska. But she gave up art for a stage, business, and marriage career. In fact, she was playing a comedy lead at the old Bijou theater in Washington when she met and married her husband. Later she owned and operated millinery shops on the West Coast.

Federation to Meet

ADOPTION of resolutions and a talk by Eric Stein, International Security Affairs specialist, Office of United Nations Political and Security Affairs, Department of State, will be spotlighted when the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs meet Monday, November 28, 11 a. m. at the Hamilton Hotel. The all-day session will be preceded by a meeting of the Advisory Council at 10 a. m.

Foreign Policy the Issue

TWO EXPERTS on international relations—Herbert Elliston, editor of The Washington Post, and Owen Lattimore, author of "Situation in Asia," will discuss "Facing Up to Our Foreign Policy" at an open meeting sponsored by the League of Women Voters of the District of Columbia on Monday, 8:15 p. m. at the Statler Hotel.

Mr. Elliston, a 1948 Pulitzer prize winner for distinguished editorial writing, will highlight the struggle between the United States and Russia.

Mr. Lattimore, currently director of the Walter Hines Page School of International Relations at John Hopkins University, will speak on "U. S. Foreign Policy in China and Other Far Eastern Countries."

Mrs. John F. Lattimore, the league's director of international relations, is in charge of the program. Tickets may be obtained at the League office, 1129 Vermont ave. nw., or by telephoning Republic 5778.

Benefit Card Party Slated

A BENEFIT card party will supplant the annual dance of the Washington Alumnae Chapter of Trinity College. The party will be held at the college in Brookland at 2 p. m. today.

The alumnae believe that a card party will appeal to a larger group, and thus net higher proceeds for its scholarship fund which aids four European girls now receiving an American education.

Trinity College is currently housing and educating a 17-year-old French student, another from Germany. Another French mademoiselle is receiving her education on a scholarship while living with her sister and G. I. brother-in-law in Arlington. A fourth young lady arrived Friday from Lithuania after five years in the Scheinfeld Displaced Persons Camp. A Trinity alumna is providing living quarters for her, and the college her scholarship, while the Washington Alumnae Chapter is providing her clothing and carfare.

Mrs. John A. Singerhoff is general chairman of the benefit.

TOWN TOPICS:

Miss Bingham Makes Holiday Debut at Tea

By Marie McNair

AT AN old-fashioned tea yesterday, Miss Cornelia Elizabeth Bingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mackay Bingham, was introduced to her parents' friends and those of her grandmother, Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer. The debut party was held at Mrs. Kremer's home.

A graduate of the National Cathedral School, Miss Bingham is a student at Colby Junior College in New London, N. H., and is here for the holiday weekend.

Frothy white net fashioned the debutante's gown, and pinned to the silver lace bodice was a spray of white orchids. Mrs. Bingham wore black with silver sequins and orchids on her shoulder and Mrs. Kremer was in an aqua lace gown. She, too, wore a shoulder spray of orchids.

Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, took their turn at the flower-decked tea table. Others who had been asked to assist were Mrs. Harold M. Stephens, Mrs. Linton Collins, Mrs. Donald Kistler, Mrs. Stuart Bingham and Mrs. Ruppert Bingham, aunts of the deb; Mrs. Leroy Mark, Mrs. William Dolph, Mrs. Helen Russell and Mrs. George White of New York.

Also Mrs. Charles Koones, another aunt of Miss Bingham; Mrs. Thomas Carson, Mrs. Kremer Post, still another aunt; Miss Helen Forrest, and Mrs. Walter Macomber. Here for the party were Mrs. George Borg of Chicago and Miss Patricia Post of Philadelphia.

AMONG THE THANKSGIVING festivities this week was the Washington Opera Guild's benefit dance last night at the National Women's Democratic Club. Proceeds will go toward the Guild's concert featuring four young artists December 3 at the United Nations Club. Mrs. Gardiner Luce and Miss Dorothy Remington were chairmen of the dance committee.

Among those attending were M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, Dr. and Mrs. Darius Contreres, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney, Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Phillips, Capt. and Mrs. Ernest Becker, Capt. and Mrs. Beverly Carter, Capt. and Mrs. C. MEMBERS OF THE SWISS DELEGATION to the FAO conference were honored at a cocktail party last evening by the Swiss Counselor and head of the group, Werner Fuchss, and Mme. Fuchss.

The party took place at the Fuchss' home in Westmoreland Hills.

HERE to stay after spending half her life in Singapore is Dutch born Mrs. Jan Havinga, now on her way to becoming an American citizen. The daughter of the late Admiral J. J. A. van Steveren, last commander-in-chief of the Royal Netherlands Naval Forces, Mrs. Havinga arrived from Java less than a month ago. She is staying with her mother who first came to this country as a refugee in 1942.

MRS. HAVINGA

Mrs. Havinga, who was Maria Lucia van Steveren, was married in Washington four years ago. Her husband, a major in the Netherlands Marine Corps, was sent to the Orient following the wedding. His wife followed.

Although Mrs. Havinga speaks Malay like a native, it didn't help any when practically every stitch of her clothing was stolen as she prepared to leave Java for the U. S. A. She arrived only with a few very summery frocks.

Eight years in America has convinced Mme. van Steveren and her family that it's the best country in the world in which to live. Mme. van Steveren has already taken out citizenship papers and Mr. Havinga, in Holland waiting for his number on the immigration quota to come up, will start the wheels turning in the same direction as soon as he arrives.

Wedding Bells Ring

Miss Nicoletta Maria Raneri, daughter of Vincenzo Raneri of Leesburg, Va., and the late Mrs. Raneri, was married October 15 in Leesburg, Va., to Nicholas Cambria, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rosario Cambria of Astoria, Long Island, N. Y.

The ceremony took place at St. John the Apostle Catholic Church with the Rev. Michael F. Igoe officiating. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore eggshell satin and carried a white orchid and stephanotis with her prayerbook. Miss Rosa Raneri was her sister's only attendant and Vito Oddo of Brooklyn, N. Y., served as best man. The ushers were Frederick S. Adrian and Hugh C. Bell.

Peake—Poore

The marriage of Miss Martha Elizabeth Poore and Harold Douglas Peake took place November 1 in the Rectory of St. Ignatius Church, Oxon Hill, Md. The Rev. Patrick J. Begley officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. Peake is the daughter of Mrs. George Ambrose Poore and her husband is the son of Mrs. John Kane Peake and the late Mr. Peake.

The marriage of Miss Kathleen Verno to Harry Ramey Browning took place November 12 at the National Baptist Memorial Church, the Rev. Edward B. Willingham officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin J. Verno of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Mr. Browning's parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Browning of Broad Run, Va.

With her violet velvet suit the bride wore gray accessories and a white orchid corsage. Miss Bettye Bynum was maid of honor and Dixie P. Fletcher served as best man.

Following a Southern motor trip the couple will live in Broad Run. Later they plan to move to Warrenton, Va.

Mrs. Browning is a clinical instructor in the Out-Patient Department of Children's Hospital. A graduate of the Mercy School of Nursing in Pittsburgh, she received her bachelor's degree in nursing education from Catholic University. Also, she served during the war in the Navy Nurse Corps.

West Virginians to Salute Navy

By Nicha Souré

IT MIGHT be a toss-up right now about the Army and Navy outcome in Philadelphia, but it's a sure thing that the West Virginia State Society dance on December 2 will be Navy night.

Rear Admiral F. G. Fahrion, superintendent of the Navl Gun Factory, will be the guest of honor when the Mountaineers meet in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. The dance will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. and is limited to West Virginians and their guests.

During the intermission, Jennings Randolph, former Congressman from West Virginia, will install Charles M. Walker, president of the society, and Mr. Walker's staff of officers.

NEBRASKANS will open their winter season with a dance tonight in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel, 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

Two Nebraskans prominent in District affairs will be among the honor guests at the dance. They are newly inducted District Judge Charles F. McLaughlin, former Nebraska Congressman, and Dr. H. M. Corning, former superintendent of schools in Omaha and now Superintendent of District Schools.

THIS being their golden jubilee year, the Tar Heels are working hard planning parties of interest to all North Carolinians in Washington.

Tonight's the night for their Thanksgiving dance in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m. to the tunes of Dave McWilliams' orchestra.

THE Arkansas State Society will prolong the Thanksgiving festivities with a mountain-style celebration at the Palisades Park today.

The Wonder Staters will dance to Doc Goodsell's Rocky Mountain Rangers' square dance rhythms. For further information about the dance or membership in the society, call Claude M. Hirst, first vice president, at Glebe 4400.

Show-Me Staters will also hold their Thanksgiving dance tonight in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Dancing will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m., with Miss Catherine Harris, pianist, entertaining the Missourians during intermission.

FOR "coffee, conversation and companionship," drop in on the Hoosier tea Sunday.

The tea of the Indiana State Society will be held in the Women's City Club, 1733 I st., between 4 and 7 p. m. In keeping with the Thanksgiving weekend, decorations will be turkey and Puritan candles. Music will be furnished by Jack Morton's orchestra. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey and Mrs. Hershey will head the receiving line.

Mrs. Frederick A. Ballard is general chairman of the dance. At the tea table will be Mrs. Paul Tombaugh, Mrs. Charles A. Halleck, Mrs. Andrew Jacobs, Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, Mrs. Noble Johnson, Mrs. Posey Kime, Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mrs. William Boehne, Mrs. Ben Stern, Mrs. John Scott, Mrs. Robert Teachout, Mrs. J. E. Brickert, Mrs. Marjorie Martin, Mrs. James Fieser and Mrs. R. R. Sayers.

PAST presidents of the Mississippi Society will be honored at their December 3 dance.

The Magnolia Staters have one of the oldest organizations in Washington, according to H. Holden Rhymes, jr., president. Organized in 1895, it is a large and active society. Such growth and activity did not just happen, but is a direct result of the contributions made to it by its former presidents.

The December 3 dance will honor these past presidents in recognition of their contribution. It will be held from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the main ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

THE MARYLAND STATE SOCIETY and the Delaware State Society have joined hands for a celebration on December 3.

The two groups will hold a banquet and dance at the Burlington Hotel. Both's States' congressional delegations have been invited to attend.

For reservations to the banquet and dance call Mrs. Ruth Henderson at Union 3085 or Mrs. Winifred Grant at Emerson 1439.

THE holiday season is upon us, and with Thanksgiving gone, Christmas celebrations are already under way in some State societies.

One society slating a Christmas party is the Georgia State Society fete on December 3. The dance will be at 9 p. m. in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

How to Pack Fancy Yule Cookies for Mailing

Will you please give instructions on how to pack and mail fancy shaped Christmas cookies so they will not break? They are to travel a few hundred miles. A. E.

Here's the way to pack those cookies so they will arrive just as they were sent—even with the antlers on the reindeers and the pack on Santa's back!

First of all, select a box which is large enough to allow a full inch of packing around the cookies on all sides. Also, use a box sturdy enough to hold up against the weight of heavy Christmas mail. A heavy, corrugated box such as canned foods come in (and which can be obtained at a grocery store) would be fine.

When you are ready to do your packing, assemble these materials: a large quantity of shredded newspaper or waxed paper (you can shred the paper yourself by cutting into ¼-inch strips), waxed paper or aluminum foil, heavy string and heavy paper for outside wrapping.

Now, place an inch-deep layer of shredded paper in the bottom of the box. On top of this place a sheet of heavy waxed paper or aluminum foil. Lay the cookies one layer deep on the waxed paper or foil. Be sure they do not overlap. Over them place another protective sheet of waxed paper or foil. On top of this goes another inch-deep layer of shredded paper—and so forth until the box is full. Two or three layers of cookies are about all that should be packed in one box. Top the contents of the box with a heavy layer of shredded paper and tie tightly shut with heavy string. If you have done your job well, the box will be so snugly packed that there is not a sound of movement when the box is shaken.

Can you tell me where I can find patterns and directions for making doll's clothes which could be used by a little girl much interested in sewing? A. K. W.

It is possible to buy patterns for doll clothes where regular dress patterns are sold. One pattern is McCall's No. 1089. It comes in sizes for dolls 13½, 15, 18 or 22 inches high.

A package containing pattern, materials, needle, thread and findings would make a nice Christmas present for a girl who sews.

Will you please tell me the location of a doll hospital in Washington? K. L.

There are several doll hospitals in Washington. There is one at 707 12th st. nw., another at 3414 14th st. nw. and a third at 1009 19th st. nw.

To T. V.: I have a doll 9½-inch breast and 16 inches tall that you may have. That is the nearest to your measurements. The taller doll had 10½-inch breast. You can write me through the Ask Anne column. L. M. L.

Can you give me the proportions of salt, water and bluing used over clinkers for Christmas decorations? The salt "grows" over the clinker, looking like feathery snow. We used it twice, but have lost the recipe. D. C. H.

Directions for making a "chemical flower garden" are given in H. Bennett's "Chemical Formulary" as follows: 6 tablespoons salt, 6 tablespoons bluing, 6 tablespoons water, 1 tablespoon ammonia water.

After thoroughly mixing above ingredients, pour over clinker (a piece of coke or brick). After piece has been wet well with liquid, drop on it a few drops of mercurochrome solution or red ink or green ink. (DO NOT use any other solutions, as you might get an adverse chemical reaction.)

After materials have been brought together, a coral-like colored growth soon begins to appear on the clinker. This increases rapidly. It also tends to form on the edges of the dish and will climb up and over them unless they have been rubbed with vaseline. Addition of a little more ammonia water to dish will produce more growth after first has stopped. Or, the whole may be allowed to dry and then kept without further changes.

Are there any books on making hats at home?

"Ever since Mother Eve first stuck a pomegranate blossom in her hair and admired her image in a pool in the Garden of Eden, woman's most dramatic form of self-expression has been her hat." So begins a charming book on millinery called, "It's Fun to Make a Hat" by Helene Garnell (Liveright Publishing Corp., N. Y.).

Given in the book are basic patterns in actual size with step-by-step suggestions as to how to convert these patterns into a hat that really does something for you! There is also a chapter titled "The Head Under Your Hat" which discusses hair styles. Other chapters on color, renovating and remodeling complete the entire hat-making picture.

Sprinkled through the book are some lively sketches which add zest and humor to the work. Some of the captions under these most expressive drawings are: "Millinery cocktail—cure for the blues." Why a bump (of a hat) if you're plump?" and "If you have a face like a parrot, don't give your head the bird!"

Will you tell me where I can purchase the new "fur" fabric articles featured in Sunday's column by Peggy Preston? Also tell me where I can buy the fabric itself for making articles at home. M. W. B.

These fur fabric articles can be purchased at an F st. clothing store. For further information about them, I suggest you call the store at Executive 5120 and ask for Mrs. Taylor.

Several department stores sell fur fabric in grey, brown and black, but I have not been able to find one which has it by the yard in colors such as are being used in the ready-made garments.

THEY RULE THE RACKETS
Read how the underworld kings skirt the law
by EDWARD T. FOLLIARD
Pulitzer Prize-winning Reporter
Starts Sunday in The Washington Post

Heard of Frank Costello, Joe Adonis, or Frank Erickson? They're the real big shots of America's underworld—the all-powerful "tygoons." They look and act like business tycoons, but they get things done like the gangster goons of the 1920's.

Beginning Sunday in The Washington Post, you can read how these tygoons operate . . . how they rule the rackets . . . and how they stay out of jail. Post reporter Edward T. Folliard brings the story to you in seven special articles.

Don't miss Folliard's eye-opening facts about Costello's influence in Tammany Hall, Erickson's vast income from the bookies, Adonis and his $300,000 trucking company. It's surprising reading—get Sunday's Post for the first installment.

Churchill Turns A Fighting 75

At the age of three score and 15, most political leaders are relaxed elder statesmen—but not England's Winston Churchill. Turning 75 next week, "Winnie" still leads His Majesty's loyal opposition, lashes his opponents with old-time fire, and looks to 1950's general election.

Can Churchill make another comeback? What has he to offer the British people? Post editor Herbert Elliston portrays this distinguished campaigner in a Sunday Post article. Be sure to read it.

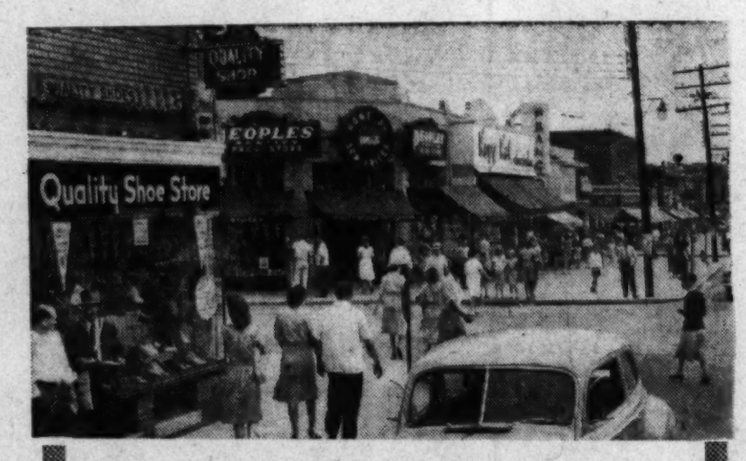
It's 60 Busy Years For the Board of Trade

It was Thanksgiving eve, 1889, when a group of Washington businessmen met to form the Board of Trade. Now that energetic body looks back on 60 years of hard work and impressive accomplishment.

Reporter Edward Ryan reviews the Board of Trade's career tomorrow in a story that reads like a diary of D. C.'s progress. What have been the organization's aims, methods and motives—and who has led it? Whether you're a newcomer or an old settler, you'll find Ryan's account high in interest, Sunday in Section II.

Meet Gifted Madame Bonnet from France

Step over the threshold of the French Embassy with Elizabeth Maguire in another "foreign" visit! Your hostess is the much-photographed Mme. Bonnet, who attends numerous parties, makes countless speeches—and still finds time to sew draperies. How this gifted lady lives is told entertainingly, with pictures, Sunday in Section IV.



D. C.'s BOOMING NEIGHBOR—
SILVER SPRING

You don't dare blink in Silver Spring—you'll miss some growth in trade or business. That fast-growing city across the Maryland line has a downtown section that rivals Washington's in many respects, and tops it in others!

For proof, see the picture story on Silver Spring Sunday in the real estate section. It's an amazing saga of a residential community that's gone commercial in a gigantic way.

In Bridal Procession

The marriage of Miss Dorothy R. Carroll to Sidney Z. Mansh took place October 30 at Beacon House, Brookline, Mass., with Rabbi Herman Bick officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll of West Medway, Mass., and Mr. Mansh is the son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Mansh of Hagerstown, Md.

Mrs. Harry Berger of Lynn, Mass., was matron of honor for her niece, and Boris Mansh of Hagerstown was his brother's best man. Following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Mansh left for a Canadian honeymoon. They will be at home in Philadelphia, Pa.

The bride, a graduate of the Massachusetts State Teachers College, did graduate work at Boston University. Mr. Mansh was graduated from Western Maryland College, did graduate work at the University of Maryland and also studied at the Georgetown University Law School. He's a member of Tau Kappa Alpha and Phi Beta Kappa honorary societies.

Thompson—Simmons

Miss Laura Kathryn Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis T. Simmons, and George McClellan Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Thompson of Takoma Park, Md., were married November 10 at the First Baptist Church of Silver Spring.

The Rev. Frank Brasington officiated. Mrs. Mildred Reid was matron of honor and Robert Boyd served as best man. The bride attended Washington Junior College and Mr. Thompson is in his senior year at Maryland University.

Hites—Rankin

The chapel of Foundry Methodist Church was the scene of the marriage of Miss Elmorine Rankin to Carter Harrison Hites, jr., on November 11 with the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Rankin of Akron, Ohio, and the bridegroom is the son of Harry Hites of this city and the grandson of the late Zebulon Weaver, former Representative from North Carolina.

Mr. Rankin gave his daughter in marriage. With her gown of white crepe she carried lilies of the valley and a prayerbook. Miss Sherry Sherwood and Zeb Weaver Hites were honor attendants for the couple. The bridegroom is a veteran of four years service with the Air Force and a graduate of American University.

The newlyweds will reside in Washington on return from their wedding trip.

One on the Aisle—

Berle Attempts Pagliacci Epic

By Richard L. Coe

WHILE MILTON BERLE has become television's top comedian, his success admittedly is tarnished by the freedom with which he appropriates other comics' material.

That this rankles into a guilty conscience is evident from the screen play of "Always Leave Them Laughing," Berle's new comedy at the Warner. Two hours are devoted to stating that no matter how much material a comic may steal, in the end he's on his own.

The picture begins with some touches of authenticity. We see the struggling young man making summer resort customers laugh with Herb Williams' piano routine, Chico Marx' piano forefinger, and a few other standbys of the past. An unabashed egocentric, he shows an old vaudeville team how they used to do their act. He's got a funny takeoff on "The Student Prince" style operetta and, from "Make Mine Manhattan," he revives Sid Caesar's sketch about the underwater fountain pen. Bert Lahr is on tap to watch him imitate Bert Lahr and his Al Jolson impression is afforded a rugged audience.

The story goes on to the inevitable backstage screen play about the understudy who takes over from the sick star, scores a triumph, etc., etc.

Now, there is no denying that Berle's efforts usually go over well with audiences; they afforded the Warner customers many laughs just as they seem to delight the television fans. Berle makes people laugh and there's no denying it.

However, in not one of his steals is he as funny as the chap who did them the first time. This seems to me, hard as h works, the critical flaw in Berle as a comic.

That the screen play goes to some lengths to plead for an original style and then repeats once more the soul-searing heartbreak that it takes to reach stardom, also suggests the scenarists should practice what they preach.

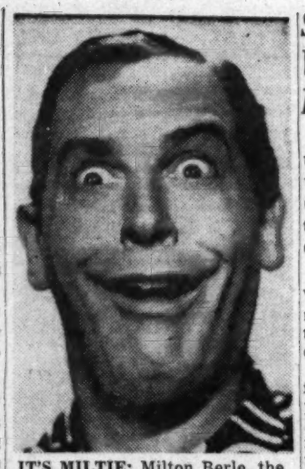
In the supporting cast are Ruth Roman, as the girl who believes in him; Virginia Mayo as the ailing star's grasping wife and Vaudeville's Grace Hayes as the retired song and dance girl, with Alan Hale as her partner-husband. They'd all have had an easier time, had "Always Leave Them Laughing" been shorter, less than an epic about comedy's bleeding heart.

THE PIX says it's inaugurating a new policy of foreign films on a double bill every other week . . . First of these is on now: "Dedee" and "Miranda." . . . "Dedee," it may be news to the Pix, is not a first-run feature, having played the Dupont several months ago, a yarn about the ladies of a French waterfront . . . "Miranda" is a British comedy about a mermaid off the Cornish coast, with Georgie Withers, Margaret Rutherford (the medieval professor of "Passport to Pimlico"), Glynis Johns and Griffith Jones.

CLARE TREE MAJOR'S Children's Theater of New York this morning and afternoon will be playing "Dick Whittington" at the Virginia Theater, Alexandria . . . This is the season's second offering by the group under sponsorship of the Children's Museum of Washington, 1607 I st., phone MEtropolitan 0439.

THE TRANS-LUX is looking for a zither, not, it adds, an auto-harp . . . Whatever it is not, a zither plays a role in the theater's next, "The Third Man" . . . The musicians' union lists no zither players in Washington . . . Anyone with zither ideas should call DIstrict 7600.

ETHEL WATERS deserves a welcome . . . Now playing Jeanne Crain's grandmother in "Pinky" on the Palace screen, the memorable entertainer is now also at the Blue Mirror, 824 14th st., singing some of the songs she has made her own: "Stormy Weather," "Dinah" and, on request, maybe, Miss Waters, "Suppertime," from "As Thousands Cheer" . . . Few can match this mistress of song and drama.



IT'S MILTIE: Milton Berle, the television favorite, stars in the Warner's musical comedy, "Always Leave Them Laughing"

Stroll and Hike Wind Up Capital Parks Program

National Capital Parks will wind up its 1949 outdoor program this weekend with a walk in Rock Creek Park today, and a hike in the Leiter Uplands of Fairfax County, Va., Sunday.

Today's walk will start at Calvert st. and Connecticut ave. nw., near Taft Bridge, at 2 p. m. The three-hour stroll will be in charge of Robert Herr, ranger-naturalist.

A hike over old roadways and footpaths of Fairfax County is planned for Sunday. Buses will leave 1416 F st. nw. at 1:30 p. m. for the meeting point at the gateway to the Leiter estate, two miles north of Chain Bridge on Virginia State Highway 123. Ranger-Naturalist Howard White will conduct the hike.

Medieval Music Wins 'Bravos!'

By Paul Hume

Fun and genius from medieval and renaissance times came to the Library of Congress last night.

The Pro Antiqua Musica Ensemble of Brussels, Belgium, displayed their ancient arts before an audience which grew more enthusiastic as the music progressed from century to century.

By the time things reached the profane boundaries of the seventeenth century one heard shouts of "bravado" and thunderous applause more usually associated with concerts of ninteenth century music.

It is astounding to realize how seldom any concert program today shows dates between 1200 and 1656, latest date on last night's program. Yet these centuries contain a number of musical geniuses as great as Bach, Handel, Beethoven, of our contemporary Stravinsky and Hindemith.

The artists last night played such long discarded instruments as the recorder, lute, minstrel's harp, and members of the viol family. Five vocalists sang in varying combinations.

The music ranged through every mood, with equal attention to thoughts of love and despair. Nature and religion joined the mixed affair and through the whole ran, as the conductor pointed out, the note of serenity.

This conductor, Safford Cape, bears a startling resemblance to the late Hans Kindler. His comments at intermission added to the enjoyment of the program. And yet we must beg him not to raise such controversial issues as the relative freshness of the ancient music he leads so eloquently and music of today.

After all, it was only two weeks ago that no less than Sir Thomas Beecham stood on the same platform and consigned all those interested in such ancient music (Sir Thomas referred to "maypole-dancers") to peaceful oblivion. Let us have both our old and our new music without strife or even mutually excluding rivalry.

One cannot and need not praise one offering from last evening more than another. The performances were smooth, beautiful and skillful beyond measure. The training of the group has been meticulous. One word of advice to these sincere musician-artists who would have us love their music: it would help so much as you sing, if you would look the part as well—and SMILE!

Forest Fires Rage In Mississippi Areas

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 25 (AP).—Forest fires are raging in 15 Mississippi counties, scarring thousands of acres of timberland and threatening some homes, the State Forestry Commission reported today. Many fires are burning unchecked because of a shortage of manpower and equipment. State Forester Albert Leggett said blazes had been reported in Attala, Neshoba, Smith, Copiah, Jasper, Clark, Calhoun, Webster, Kemper, Lauderdale, Newton, Tallahatchie, Simpson, Sharkey and Issaquena Counties.

Virginia Mental Care Called Substandard

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter
(Second of a Series)

Virginia ranks third—from the bottom—among the 48 States in the ratio between employes and patient population in its hospitals for mental illness.

According to figures tabulated in 1946, the most recent comparable data available, the Old Dominion's failure to provide personnel to care for its mentally ill was exceeded only in Oklahoma and Kansas.

This is the startling condition set forth in the Duke report on the State Department of Mental Hygiene and Mental Institutions recently submitted to Governor Tuck.

The comprehensive study of Virginia's inadequate mental health program says that recent expansion of institution staffs has increased employe rolls from 1195 in June, 1946, to 1827 in June, 1949.

Nevertheless, the study finds that "conditions exist in the mental institutions that cannot be allowed to continue. They are still substandard, and they are still undermanned."

The desperate shortage of trained personnel runs the gamut from psychiatrists to nurses to clerical workers to orderlies.

Not Attractive Enough

It stems not only from insufficient funds, but from a scarcity of available personnel and from failure of the State to make jobs attractive enough.

The State does not have adequate housing for hospital staffs or for patients. Pay scales are too low. There is little or no opportunity for training or research in the field of psychiatry.

The highest ranking superintendent of a Virginia mental institution starts out at $9324 a year. Senior physicians are paid between $6462 and $7416 annually. All other physicians at mental institutions receive between $4848 and $6144.

For the latter class, $1248 consists of "maintenance" costs, so the actual cash salary is $3600.

The Duke report cites but makes no specific recommendations on increases. It leaves that job up to the Director of the Budget.

"The most effective means of attracting energetic, ambitious and vigorous young physicians—and the more learned of the older physicians—is through the use of hospitals as training centers," the report states.

The State institutions of Virginia "are far below the standards" established by the Council on Education and Hospitals of the American Medical Association in conjunction with the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology.

This situation is reflected in tables that show 106 psychiatrists and 14 physicians as standard for Virginia's mentally ill population. The State has only 21 persons, classified merely as "physicians," serving in these capacities. And the proposed five-year goal is 56 psychiatrists and 10 other physicians.

Admitting that staffs in professional and semi-professional fields are "pitifully weak," the report looks to "an attainable objective now." Then it would "look to the future" for a higher goal.

The immediate objective would provide for a ratio of about 1 physician for 150 patients, as compared to the American Psychiatric Association standard of 1 to 80 patients.

The most urgent recommendation for attracting more and better doctors to help mental patients is immediate construction of an Institute of Psychiatry at Richmond to collaborate with the Medical College of Virginia.

Approved by 1944 Act

A 1944 act of the General Assembly approved the Institute, but did not specify its location or set up the necessary machinery to get it started.

"The institute should serve as a receiving center and, to the extent practicable, as a receiving and observation hospital," the study suggests.

The proposed bed capacity is 150, of which 80 should be treatment and research beds and 70 receiving and observation beds.

A staff of almost 100 persons, including a medical director of the institute, is outlined in the survey.

"Leaving aside even any question of the efficacy of their ministrations," the report says, "there is one coldly practical reason for having more physicians."

Because of the shortage, "examinations are delayed for days, weeks or months" before discharge of a patient. "Meanwhile, the cost of care goes on that much longer than necessary at an average cost of $1.32 a day for each patient whose release is delayed."

The pressing need for trained personnel is seen in all other categories of assistants.

The Duke report urges that staffs of registered nurses be increased to one for 40 patients—40 percent below APA standards. The average in Virginia now is one nurse for every 265 patients.

Attendants who assist nurses in "custodial" care of patients are similarly underpaid and must work a 48-hour week in eight-hour shifts at best, more frequently in 12-hour shifts, the report finds.

The situation with respect to trained therapists may be judged by Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg, "the best staffed of any of the hospitals."

There is "something less than one occupational, physical or recreational therapist for each 200 patients."

Thus the report says that "nothing short of a complete reorientation of the thinking on staffing of the therapy departments . . . offers any possibility of meeting even the minimum requirements."

Below Public School Pay

For special training of mentally defective patients, a job requiring skilled teachers, "the rates of pay established are below those ordinarily offered in the public schools." Beginning salaries range from $1320 to $1620.

As for the admission and release of patients under present conditions, the report recommends, in part:

1. Changes in the law which says any person committed to a mental hospital is incompetent to transact any business until finally discharged.

2. Avoidance of use of the term "insane" wherever possible.

3. Increase in the statutory limit of $1 a day for care of patients who are boarded outside institutions.

4. Expansion of foster home care for patients who can be so accommodated.

Facing Murder Charge, Man Is Released on Bond

A 52-year-old Arlington man was released in $2500 bond yesterday on a charge of murdering a fellow roommer at 2713 S. 1st rd. Thanksgiving night.

The victim, John Henry Blakes, 52, was dead on arrival at Arlington Hospital about 11 p. m. Thursday, with a shotgun wound in the heart.

Accused of his murder is Robert Elken Briggs. Arlington Detective Dudley Rector said the shooting followed an argument, and that both men had apparently been drinking. He said Briggs claimed he shot in self defense after Blakes came after him with an ax.

Arlington County Court Substitute Judge Harry R. Thomas yesterday continued a preliminary hearing in the case until Tuesday.

Girl Recovers $18 After Chase Of Purse Thieves

Miss Joyce F. Woody, 17, of 633 I st. nw., had her purse snatched, and recovered, in a matter of minutes, Thursday night.

She told police three youths grabbed the pocketbook near her home. They fled in three directions, she said, but an unidentified soldier and an unidentified civilian pursued the youth who turned out to have the purse.

As he ran, she said, he dropped the purse. He escaped, but the bag, containing $18, was returned to her.

$19,451 Lien For Taxes Filed On Gambler

The Federal Government yesterday filed a $19,451 tax-lien notice against Theodore (Little Joe) Scheve, 30, recently convicted with three others of running a big-money dice game here.

The tax-lien notice, on file in District Court, lists Scheve, alias Theodore J. Henderson, as owing the money for the years 1944-1947.

Scheve is currently free under bond pending an appeal from the gaming conviction which resulted in a one-to-three year prison sentence.

Tax-lien notices totalling $111,338.25 were placed against the late Robert W. Lyons, prominent attorney who died here on February 3. The assessments were for the years, 1945-1947, and were for income.

His son, Robert B. Lyons, of the Bowen Building, who is executor of his estate, declined to comment until he is given some notice of the lien being placed.

Income tax liens for the years 1945 and 1947 totalling $5382 were placed against Leon Raesly, a public relations man with offices in the Shoreham Building.

Asked for comment, Raesly said: "It's a hell of a way to treat a taxpayer. It's a horrible way for a citizen to be treated in a democracy."

He said he has been negotiating with the Internal Revenue Bureau about the assessments and hoped to apply an overpayment of a previous year to the sum allegedly due. As recently as November 10, he said, he received a letter from a revenue official who made no notice of an impending lien.

D. C. Offered $126,060 for Parking Lease

The District yesterday was offered $126,060.48 for a two-year lease on a 1.8-acre parking lot near the Municipal Center.

High bidder for the 500-car lot was Grand Plaza Parking Area, Inc., which operates several other parking lots in the city and formerly operated the lot on 14th st. nw., behind the District Building. Fourteen other bids ranged from $111,733.20 down to $2400.

The lot is bounded by Indiana ave., 6th st., C st. nw. and Muncipal Center Plaza. The District expects eventually to build the western wing of the Muncipial Center there.

Paul Chalupsky, District property officer, said he would recommend that the Commissioners lease the land to the Grand Plaza Co. as of December 1.

Award of the lease will not mean the opening of new parking facilities in the downtown area, Chalupsky said. Motorists have been parking there for the past month since the District cleared the site of nine old buildings. It simply means they will start paying for the privilege.

The lease will stipulate that District employes may reserve 148 of the spaces.

Fun With a Memory Test

Ordinarily, the memorizing of anything is considered a chore. Some children enjoy learning the multiplacation tables or a poem, but such pursuits are not ordinarily felt to be much fun.

The scouts, among other things, attempt to develop their powers of observation. So, when they are on hikes, they are encouraged to pay attention to things around them to be able to describe what they have seen. Sometimes a variation of this is carried on in town or city. A group of youngsters will look at a shop window full of articles for a specified length of time and then see how many of the things they can list.

At home, one can have fun with such a memory test. A card table or other flat-surfaced object is used to hold 10 or more simple articles that can be found in any home. A ring, pencil, ash tray, knife, book, penny, toy auto, blank piece of paper, orange and necktie might make up one such combination. Whoever is responsible for gathering together the articles, covers them with a cloth. The cloth is removed for a two-minute period and those playing try to list all the articles after they have been re-covered.

If all playing find the task too easy, the time may be shortened or additional articles included.

But I Must Wait

I want to whisper to your heart . . . And very softly say . . . How much you really mean to me . . . Each moment of the day . . . And yet I know that I must wait . . . For still another dawn . . . And I must linger in my dreams . . . Until the night is gone . . . I wish I had the right to speak . . . My loving thoughts of you . . . And do so many other things . . . To make your dreams come true . . . To put my arms around you and . . . To keep your body warm . . . And comfort you against the clouds . . . Of every coming storm . . . But I must wait until the sun . . . Has reached its golden height . . . And I am free to hold your hand . . . And kiss your lips good-night.

THE DISTRICT LINE

It's Such a Sound Idea People Will Think He's Kidding

A. F. J., a well-known local executive with a pixilated sense of humor, writes:

"This is the season of the year when hunters accidentally kill each other in great numbers. It occurs to me that, with a little imagination, local hunters could have a grand time and yet be perfectly safe.

"Each Fall, Dr. Mann should set aside a few days for hunters at the Zoo. Of course, he should not go so far as to allow anybody to shoot any of his beasts. But the hunters could get all dressed up in woolens and sweaters and jackets and red caps and boots, and bring along their guns with telescopic sights, and draw a bead on any kind of animal their heart desired.

"They could go on African safaris and get elephants, rhinoceroses, wildebeests and all the rest, snapping their empty rifles to their heart's content. They could go to Alaska and get Kodiak bears—and as for deer and black bear and ducks and geese—the Zoo is full of them.

"All Doc Mann would have to do would be to make sure that nobody brought along any live ammunition.

"Another advantage of this method is that it eliminates the necessity of having to deal with dead carcasses. What is more useless than a dead elephant? Besides, if you will look through the food advertisements in The Washington Post, you will find much better meat than the tenderest piece of venison that was ever served.

"The hunters could walk home through Rock Creek Park and return as exhausted and uncomfortable as they could possibly get in Northern Maine—or Tibet, for that matter. And think of the money they would save.

"This idea could be extended to the Aquarium in the Department of Commerce. Fishermen could bring their boxes and tackle, and a place could be arranged for them to spend endless hours rigging up their rods. This is nine-tenths of fishing, anyhow.

"The only difference in this kind of fishing is that they would not have to dispose of any dead fish. And what is deader—or more unwanted—than a dead fish?

"I think we could have some wonderful hunting and fishing parties. Hotels near the Zoo could make special arrangements for the sportsmen by removing mattresses from their beds, and providing lumpy pillows. Their bars could serve inferior whisky, straight from the bottle, and the restaurants might put up special, half-cooked, greasy meals.

"In other words, everything could be done to create the proper hunting-and-fishing-camp atmosphere—including special rooms set aside for uninterrupted, day-and-night poker games.

"I make these suggestions because any ducks I ever brought back to Washington cost me at least $20 each, plus a dental bill necessitated by my chewing on bird shot."

REBUTTAL

In answer to Dave Kandel's recent verse implying that I stand over my contributors with a whip to force them to write verse for this space, Mrs. Leona E. Kidwell of 4910 Rock Spring rd., Arlington, Va., says:

It ain't so, David Kandel.
I know, 'cause gems of mine
Seem doomed to hit the basket,
And never make the "Line."

HOW THOUGHTFUL OF THEM

Rod Allen of 2817 Connecticut ave. nw. wants to know: "Why didn't they build the Dupont Circle underpass straight under the circle, instead of putting a curve in it?"

The "vehicular underpass" (in plain language, the one for autos) is built in a straight line.

The streetcars follow a curved course so that passengers won't have to walk all the way to the center of the circle to board the cars.

WARNING!

Capital Transit finds that one-fourth of all its accidents occur on just six streets. It might be well to mark them in your memory, and be especially careful on them The six are:

Benning rd. ne., H st. ne., F st. nw., G st. nw., U st. nw. and both portions of Pennsylvania ave.

The business district, bounded by 7th and 15th sts. nw. and Pennsylvania and New York aves., accounts for less than 13 per cent of the total number of accidents.

DON'T PUT IT OFF UNTIL TOMORROW

Mrs. George Moth of 4404 75th ave., Bellmead, Md., asks:

"Does anybody in Washington repair broken toys and dolls, for distribution among poor children for Christmas?"

I'm sure glad she asked, because it gives me an excuse for printing a reminder that Washington's firemen will be doing that very thing again this year.

Fire Chief Joseph A. Mayhew says that if you'll take your toys to any District fire station, his boys will pretty them up and see that they get to the proper community agencies for distribution.

And please don't "put it off for a day or two," because if you do, the kids who are waiting for toys won't get them by Christmas Day.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I have been arrested twice for speeding—once for going slightly over 35 miles per hour. As a result, my driver's license has been suspended.

I know of no authority for such action, and have written letters to Commissioner Young, Traffic Director Keneipp, the Board of Revocation and others, and have asked them to cite any regulation which empowers them to take away my license.

I have gotten one answering letter asserting that the District does have this right—but it failed to cite the authority for the statement. They just ignore me.

What about this?

Name Withheld

Dear Sir:

Corporation Counsel Vernon West assures me that the Traffic Act definitely gives the Commissioners the right to take away your license if there is just cause for such action.

Mr. West says that if you don't agree that just cause has been proved, you may appeal to the Commissioners for a review of your case, or may take it to the District Court of Appeals.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

India Edwards Turns the Tables

By Drew Pearson

MRS. INDIA EDWARDS, the lady brain of the Democratic National Committee, was debating on the New York Herald Tribune Forum with the heads of two leading women's clubs—Dr. K. Frances Scott, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and Mrs. J. Blair Buck, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Both these organizations are supposed to be nonpartisan, but, in their debate with Mrs. Edwards, Dr. Scott and Mrs. Buck both admitted frankly that they worked for the election of Margaret Chase Smith, Republican, as Senator from Maine. In fact, Dr. Scott and Mrs. Buck almost outdid themselves in claiming credit for Senator Smith's election. They said they supported her not because she was a Republican but because she was a woman.

Many listeners expected that sparks would fly when Mrs. Edwards, staunch Democrat, replied. But she sweetly agreed. She said there should be more women in politics and she was delighted at the support given to Senator Smith.

This took place about a month ago, and since then India Edwards has kept very quiet—until the other day. By this time Dr. Scott and Mrs. Buck had pretty much forgotten their panel discussion; then they got letters from Mrs. Edwards.

Very sweetly, Mrs. Edwards reminded them of their Herald Tribune statements that they had supported Senator Smith not because of her political party but because she is a woman. Continuing Mrs. Edwards said that another fine woman—Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, Democrat—was running in California for United States Senator.

Mrs. Edwards said she knew it would be consistent with the stated policy of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs to endorse Mrs. Douglas, and that she was eagerly awaiting word to this effect

Students of the U. S. A.

THOUGH it hasn't made headlines, 28,000 foreign students are studying in the United States this year, most of them sponsored by individual colleges or student groups as their contribution toward breaking down prejudice between nations.

Most of the students are from non-Soviet countries, but some slipped through the Iron Curtain from Poland, Czechoslovakia and Finland.

The list of colleges promoting this people-to-people friendship is too long to be given here, but perhaps Hastings College, Nebraska, is typical. Not a wealthy institution, Hastings began making room for refugees discovered by Hastings Gis in slave labor camps.

The students have included a Jewish refugee from Czechoslovakia, two Norwegian veterans of the underground, several Koreans, one Chinese, an Iranian and several Mexicans. The college has used these students on speaking teams to deliver foreign affairs talks all through Nebraska. This has kept Midwesterners closely in touch with the outside world and has been a factor in combating the isolation that engulfed the Midwest after World War I.

Tom Clark and Texas

JUSTICE TOM CLARK was really put on the spot regarding civil liberties when the case of a convicted Negro murderer in Clark's home town—Dallas—came before the Supreme Court last week. It will be his first real test of civil liberties.

The case, Lee Cassell vs. the State of Texas, involves the fact that Texas has consistently put a Negro on every jury. Cassell's lawyer, Chris Dixie, once Justice Hugo Black's law clerk, was appointed by the Supreme Court to argue the case, and contended that this was an evasion of civil liberties.

If the number of Negroes on Texas juries fluctuated from zero to three or four, there would be no invasion of civil liberties, Dixie contended, but with one lone Negro consistently on every jury, it looked like a deliberate pattern.

Justice Clark, who had a good record on civil liberties as Attorney General, followed the argument carefully, asked helpful questions of Mr. Greenhill, Assistant Attorney General representing Texas.

Merry-Go-Round

A MEMORIAL to Walter Winchell's mother has been erected at Doctors Hospital, New York, where she recently fell to her death. A catch has been placed on all windows so that they cannot be raised more than six inches. Walter's mother, 77, had a fainting spell in front of a window. She had just talked to Winchell on the telephone after his Sunday broadcast and congratulated him on receiving a medal from the Marine Corps Reserve Association . . . The man responsible for beating Teamsters' boss Dave Beck in his own Seattle balliwick is Harold J. Gibson, dynamic leader of the International Association of Machinists. Gibson is a labor leader to watch in the future. A lot of teamsters, incidentally, were delighted at Beck's defeat . . . Gov. Frank Carlson of Kansas would like to appoint Editor-Statesman Marcellus Murdoch of the Wichita Eagle to the Senate vacancy left by the death of Clyde Reed. The only trouble is that this would make two Senators from Wichita.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—During a chorus rehearsal for the movie version of "Annie, Get Your Gun," Bob Alton, the dance director, urged the chorus boys to step livelier. Betty Hutton saw him instruct one of the wilting chorus boys: "Put some virility into it" . . . Miss Hutton advised: "That will entitle him to a stunt check."

Solly Violinsky, the songwriter who boasts that he hasn't worked in 30 years, believes this is the ideal existence. One of his devoted believers is Al Lackey, the former husband of Sophie Tucker. At first, when Violinsky studied Lackey's work-record, he said, contemptuously: "Compared to me, Al is a slave" . . . But then he lectured and trained Lackey, and stiffened his resistance to jobs. When he learned that Lackey was offered a $150-a-day job in the Milton Berle movie, Violinsky wired him: "Don't weaken." And when he learned that Lackey had accepted, wired: "Yellow."

Prime Minister Bidault of France tells of his visit to Moscow and of the dinner given by Stalin at the Kremlin. After all the toasts had been made Bidault proposed a toast: "To Mr. Pavlov, the brilliant translator, whose work has been so useful to us in these conferences" . . . Stalin turned to Pavlov, pretended to glower: "Rendering service to France? Siberia for you," then smiled and drank the toast.

David Sarnoff, head of RCA, brought a new long-playing recording to Arturo Toscanini, and said: "While you were in Italy I found a new young conductor. I'd like your opinion of him" . . . Then he played the Tchaikowsky recording, while Toscanini listened . . . The Maestro frowned, at first, then signalled that the conductor was showing promise. As the record continued, Toscanini began to nod approval. And not until it was half over did Toscanini finally recognize the conductor: "Mon Dieu. It's me."

Nunnally Johnson, the movie producer, lunched in the studio commissary where he saw a producer who has had five successive hit films. "He's awful. Nobody likes him" said John . . . Then came another producer, whose last two films made six million dollars for the studio. "A terrible man. Very unpopular," said Johnson . . . Then came a producer who's had three flops, and whose film received bad notices. "Nice fellow," said Johnson. "All of us producers are fond of him."

Carlos P. Romulo, president of the U. N. General Assembly, is a friend of Thomas J. Watson, head of International Business Machines. Watson presented to the United Nations a lectern for use by the U. N. speakers. It has two clocks set into it—the first, an ordinary time-recorder; the second, an unusual one which shows only the seconds and minutes, and reveals to a speaker exactly how long he's been on the platform . . . "After listening to some of the speeches," Romulo told Watson, "you should've added a third time-reorder: A calendar."

In reviewing the recent New York elections, one of Newbold Norris' friends commented on the fact that all the amendments had received a majority of the votes. "Newbold, "he said, "you should've run as an amendment" . . . Because Morton Downey has so much invested in Sortilege perfume, his friends now order it under the name of "Morton Downey's Blood" . . . The Voice of America used Karl Inwald, the pianist of El Morocco's Champagne Room, for a broadcast to his native Austria . . . Arthur Lesser is producing his next show in Paris, by way of preview before bringing it to Broadway—because the sets and costumes cost a fraction of the New York cost. The "Carmen" sets for his Ballet de Paris cost him only $6000.
